Senate, 2-1, Boosts Army Plane Limit To 6,000

Leahy Insists on Guam; $500,000,000 Funds Bill Set for Passage This Week

Expansion of the Army air force to 6,000 first-line planes was voted by the Senate yesterday, as the Administration cleared the way for actually starting the new arms program.

Voting 54 to 28 in favor of providing 500 more planes than authorized by the House, the Senate gave its answer to criticism of the President's emergency defense program and foreign policy from "isolationist" members in the last week.

Passage of the $367,000,000 bill, which would strengthen defenses of the Panama Canal and authorize training of pilots for the 3,700 increase in Army planes, probably will come today. The Senate must act on several amendments, but yesterday's vote indicated its sentiment.

Joint Maneuvers in April

The Navy Department announced the Army and Navy will hold joint air maneuvers next month to test defenses of the New England industrial area.

"Joint Air Exercise No. I" will be held April 17 to 22, the department said, with two battleships, a light cruiser, three destroyers, six submarines and three seaplane tenders participating with the air forces of both services.

The Navy Department also announced that a board composed of officers of the Regular Navy and Reserve convened yesterday to formulate Naval Reserve policies under the new basic law enacted last year.

Leahy Backs Guam Project

Consideration of the naval phase of the emergency defense plan began before the Senate Naval Affairs Committee with Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, urging that aviation facilities be established on the Western Pacific island of Guam. The House has rejected the project.

Since both the bill to establish 12 naval air stations and the emergency plane measure are merely authorization bills, Administration leaders moved to provide funds for actually starting work on the new defense program.

Senator Thomas (Democrat) of Oklahoma, new chairman of the Senate military appropriations subcommittee, said that the half-billion-dollar Army supply bill probably would be reported by his group before the end of the week. The measure carries $50,000,000 for purchasing the first 565 planes under the new program.

Funds Bill This Week

Majority Leader Barkley said the appropriation bill will be passed this week if possible. After more than a week's debate on the arms program and foreign policy, the supply bill is expected to go through the Senate in short order.

The House Appropriations Committee began consideration of the request submitted by the President Saturday, to provide $123,000,000 for new weapons and equipment for the Army, start the training program for 20,000 civilian pilots and augment seacoast defenses.

Senate criticism of the mounting prices of airplanes resulted in an informal agreement by leaders to accept an amendment to limit manufacturers' profits to 10 per cent for all planes ordered under the bill. Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, said he would offer such an amendment after Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, demanded a Congressional inquiry into "fabulous" prices charged the Government for planes.

"Golden Harvest" Attacked

Yesterday's debate centered around charges by Senators Tobey, Norris and Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, that aircraft manufacturers would reap a "golden harvest" from the $170,000,000 to be spent for new planes.

Norris said he would support the arms bill because he believed the United States to be weak in de-

New York WPA Tears Down the Wrong Building

New York, March 6.—Red-faced WPA officials revealed today that a crew sent to tear down a building had done a thorough job—of demolishing the adjacent building.

Both structures were three stories, officials explained, and neither bore a street number. The wrecking was carried out on request of the owner of the still-standing building as part of the city's improvement program.

Stimson Warns U. S. Cannot Stand Aloof

Former Republican Cabinet Member Supports Roosevelt's Foreign Policy As Safeguard to Democracy

By Henry L. Stimson
Former Secretary of State and War
Special to The Washington Post

There is an increasing number of our people who feel that, in the face of the situation abroad, our Government should follow a policy of farsighted affirmative action rather than one of drift and negation. Their belief is that in the former lies the best hope for the prevention of war; while by the latter we should run the most serious risk of becoming ultimately dragged into war.

Recent actions indicate that this may be also becoming the policy of our Government. I refer for example to the action of the Secretary of State in persuading our airplane manufacturers not to sell planes to nations—notably Japan—which are engaged in bombing helpless civilian populations; the action of the Export and Import Bank in making a loan of $25,000,000 to China; the action of the Government encouraging the sale of large numbers of airplanes to Great Britain and France in the emergency which confronts those nations; the very frank and outspoken answer which Mr. Welles, of the State Department, addressed to the German Ambassador on the subject of the provocative utterances of the Government—controlled Nazi press, and finally the January address of the President to Congress indicating that it was the intention of our Government to bring our influence to bear upon aggressor nations by methods which were "short of war, but stronger and more effective than mere words."

STIMSON

I have long been in favor of such a policy. I believe that our foreign policy cannot with safety be geographically limited to a defense of this hemisphere or of our own continental boundaries. On the contrary, I think that if we should stand idly by without protest or action until Britain, France and China are either conquered or forced to make terms with militaristic aggressors, our own hemisphere might become economically so affected and militarily so endangered that it would be neither a safe nor happy place to live in for a people with

U. S. Arrests 8 As $1,000,000 Counterfeiters

Suspected Leader Deported in 1935 To Germany

By the United Press.

New York, March 6.—Secret Service operatives and police last night arrested six men and two women as members of a counterfeiting ring which they said had passed $1,000,000 in bogus money in a year.

Supervising Agent James J. Maloney, who directed the raids, estimated the ring was responsible for 90 per cent of the counterfeit money distributed in this area recently.

The leader of the gang was said to be Henry Braun, alias Neuwirth, who was deported to Germany in 1935 after he had served a three-year term at Leavenworth for counterfeiting. He returned in 1936 and was arrested last year, charged with illegal entry and counterfeiting but jumped his bail.

His wife, Anna, also was arrested. Most of the counterfeiting paraphernalia and $5,000 in bogus $10 banknotes were found in their two-room apartment.

Others seized were Joseph L. (Red) Miller, alias Kennedy, Thompson and Murphy; Michael Lysaght, in whose possession police say was found $1,000 in bogus bills; Walter H. Irons, in whose apartment an oatmeal box containing $4,000 in bogus cash was found, and Irons' wife, Evelyn, 35; Stanley Woodrow Irons and Louis Sola.

Twenty-five plates, for making $5, $10 and $20 bills, were found in the Braun apartment.

Greek Archbishop Pleads Not Guilty To Perjury Charge

New York, March 6 (AP).—The Most Rev. Nichola Kedroff, archbishop of the Russian Greek Orthodox Church in North America and the Aleutian Islands, today pleaded not guilty to charges of conspiracy and perjury, growing out of a deportation hearing in the case of Michael P. Kosolapoff. He was released in the custody of his lawyer, who declared the prelate's difficulties resulted from the "confidence" he placed in Kosolapoff.

Father Cristea Dies; Once Rumania Ruler

Patriarch and Premier Succumbs at 70 On French Riviera

By the United Press.

Cannes, France, March 6.—Patriarch Miron Cristea, 70-year-old premier of Rumania under King Carol II's royal dictatorship, died tonight after an illness which brought him to the French Riviera recently.

Father Cristea died of pneumonia. He had suffered a chill while en route here from Bucharest. The body will be embalmed Tuesday, will lie in state Thursday in the Russian Cathedral and be sent to Bucharest Friday.

Headed Rumanian Government

(In Bucharest King Carol appointed Armand Calinescu, defense minister in the Cristea cabinet and present vice regent, to the premiership).

Cristea, who had been premier since February, 1938, served as nominal head of the Rumanian government during the time that its liberal constitution was replaced by an authoritarian regime.

On March 30, 1938, when Carol abolished all political parties and created a supreme economic council and a crown council, he retained Father Cristea as prime minister and placed him on the crown council.

Served as Regent

Patriarch Cristea, metropolitan primate of Rumania in 1919 and since 1924 patriarch of the Orthodox Apostolic Church, was a prominent organizer of Rumanian church and monastery life.

He handled the preliminary negotiations for settlement of differences between the Anglican and apostolic churches.

After the death of King Ferdinand I he served as regent from 1927 until 1930.

Hague's Son Approved

Trenton, N. J., March 6 (AP).—The State Senate, in executive session, tonight confirmed the appointment of Frank Hague, jr., 34-year-old lawyer-son of Mayor Hague, of Jersey City, as a lay judge of the New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals. The vote was reported to be 20 to 6.

D. C. Policeman, Indicted In Rum Fraud, Suspended

A Washington policeman, indicted with his father by a Federal grand jury for failure to make proper records in the operation of a Virginia distillery, with intent to defraud the Government of taxes, last night was suspended from the force.

The officer, Melvin M. Kite, was recently transferred to Thirteenth Precinct station in a shakeup of the vice squad. At the time he asked for a leave of absence. Last night, on returning to the station, he was ordered to give up his pistol and badge. No reason was given for the suspension.

The policeman's father, Lester V. Kite, operated the distillery at Stanley, Va., in Page County.

Members of the Alcohol Tax Unit seized the plant November 26, after a long investigation.

The indictments, returned Saturday night at Danville, Va., also involved Charles Good, a distillery employe. Good and the elder Kite have been arrested and are free on bail.

According to F. S. Tavenner jr., United States Attorney, the indictments also accuse the Kites of removing untaxed spirits to places other than bonded warehouses and with concealing them.

The Kites were also charged, Tavenner said, with omitting certain items from the records necessary for establishing the revenue tax.

Miaja, Given Madrid Rule, Seeks Truce

Loyalist General, Made Dictator, Appeals to Foe for 'Peace With Honor'

By the United Press.

Madrid, March 6.—The loyalist military junta which seized power in a surprise coup d'etat recalled Gen. Jose Miaja, "savior of Madrid," tonight to serve as virtual dictator and exchanged radio offers with the insurgents for a "peace with honor" to end the civil war.

"We want to negotiate a peace as soon as possible," Miaja announced by radio immediately after assuming office.

Miaja, stripped of his powers as defense generalissimo by Premier Negrin only a few hours before Negrin was overthrown Sunday, was called to Madrid by airplane from Valencia and named president of the new six-man national defense council.

Miaja, made generalissimo of all land, sea and air forces after the fall of Barcelona on January 26, was removed by Negrin because he contended further republican resistance was suicidal and pleaded for the cabinet to sue for peace.

Negotiations Imminent

The appointment of Miaja was regarded as opening the way for immediate direct negotiations on an armistice.

Gen. Segismundo Casado, who led the army coup d'etat and overthrew the Negrin regime, became war minister under Miaja and voluntarily surrendered his rank of general, resuming that of colonel which he held before Negrin made him commander of the Madrid zone. He said Negrin's authority had been illegal and he had no right to the higher rank.

Negrin, former Foreign Minister Alvarez del Vayo and a group of their cabinet aides escaped into France by airplane from the Madrid-Valencia zone after Casado had announced they would be prevented from making any "cowardly escape abroad."

Negrin Leaves for Paris

The radio appeals for peace, crackling back and forth across the no-man's-land around Madrid where Insurgent Gen. Franco is massing 800,000 troops for the biggest blow of the 31-month-old war unless the loyalists surrender, were expected to be followed shortly by direct negotiations.

Casado said the military regime was ready to end the war if Franco would promise an independent Spain and prevent bloody reprisals.

"We want Spain liberated of all foreign influences," Casado said, meaning that Franco must compel his German and Italian supporters to relinquish their Spanish foothold. "Our movement is republican and anti-Communist."

[Casado was said by the Associated Press to have demanded only two conditions for surrender:

The Bronson Cutting lectures will be taken out of Constitution Hall because it was barred to Marian Anderson, it was announced last night.

Adolf A. Berle, Assistant Secretary of State, and Senator Robert M. La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, joined in condemning the action of the D. A. R., which owns Constitution Hall.

From the platform of the Hall, Senator La Follette, chairman of the lecture committee, explained there had not been time to arrange for another hall. "The third lecture of this series, by Dr. Gunnar Myrdal, will, however, be held in another auditorium," he said.

House Asked To Investigate 'Bootleg' Milk

Smith, of Alexandria, Urges Probe; District Code Revision Drafted

A Congressional investigation into unlicensed milk and cream shipments into Washington was asked late yesterday by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Alexandria, Va.

Smith submitted a resolution calling for the House District Committee to study the sources and methods of "bootlegging" dairy products into the District, their effect on health, and methods of banning the practice.

Smith said illegal shipment of milk and cream into Washington has had a "very serious effect" on the local firms who have continued to meet the stringent requirements of the District Health Department. Low-quality products and reduced prices, he said, have caused legitimate firms severe financial loss.

His resolution came as Corporation Counsel Seal put finishing touches on a revised milk code designed to bar illegal shipments of dairy products past the District line.

These revisions will be presented

Bank Discovers Hoard of Bombs It Held 22 Years

Chicago, March 6 (I.N.S.).—Potential destruction in the form of four powerful homemade bombs today was removed from a safe deposit box in which the explosives had lain for 22 years.

The bombs were fashioned by Reinbold A. Faust, a naturalized German, now 74, when he became embittered in 1917 because his adopted country declared war on his native land. Faust had planned to hurl them at Liberty Loan and Preparedness meetings.

They were discovered today when the safe deposit firm moved to a new location. Faust was taken into custody.

Chicago Jails 100 Outside Bund Hall To Prevent Riot

Chicago, March 6 (I.N.S.).—More than 100 persons were arrested tonight in a crowd that gathered in front of a hall where Fritz Kuhn, national director of the German-American Bund, was addressing an audience of 500, many in Bund uniforms.

There was no disorder. Police said the arrests were made to prevent possible rioting. The prisoners were released without charges.

Wallace Asks End of State Bars to Trade

Says Restrictions Cause Great Loss; Hull Defends Pacts Against Tariff Drive

By William V. Nessly.

Attacking a situation "of critical importance" to every economic group" in the country, Agriculture Secretary Wallace yesterday called for removal of State trade barriers which he said are causing great economic losses.

State tax laws, public health and sanitation measures, motor truck legislation, quarantines, grading, labeling and package laws were pictured as operating to impede commerce within the Nation and, while he said the heaviest burden for remedial action falls on the States, the Secretary indicated there are "a number of things" the Federal Government can do to restrict the practice.

Secretary of State Hull and Assistant Secretary Sayre appeared before the Senate Finance Committee in opposition to proposals for increases in import duties which they contended would be in conflict with commitments under some of the reciprocal trade agreements.

Hull Cites 22 Pacts

Secretary Hull appealed to the committee not to take action that might "destroy the cornerstone upon which the trade agreement policy rests." He said the State Department program was "the only one offered by any government" for reconstruction of international trade and pointed to the fact that 22 nations have made agreements under the program as indicating it is being "universally accepted."

Apparently referring to the dictator countries, the secretary said:

"We are reaching the time when nations with opposite political and economic ideas to our are becoming more interested in a program which gives equal opportunities of trade and exchange to them as well as to others."

His comment would apply particularly to Germany, which has based her foreign trade on bi-lateral barter agreements.

Wallace made his statements in the foreword of a detailed report by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics on State trade barriers, held to be causing "incalculable" losses in trade. The report is sponsored by the marketing committee of the National Association of Commissioners, Secretaries and Directors of Agriculture.

"The existence of trade barriers between the States," Wallace wrote, "provided a powerful incentive for calling the Constitutional Convention of 1787. The resulting Constitution, it was thought, insured free trade between the States.

"Today, we cannot say that we have free trade between the States."

Some Such Laws Praised

The report declares that probably many of the deterrent laws are motivated by such desirable objectives as protection of health, prevention of fraud and conservation of future food supplies.

"But some laws," it adds, "and some city ordinances, seem to have been designed to protect nearby farmers by making it unnecessarily difficult or expensive for distant farmers to get their products on the local market."

Mentioning a number of laws similar to that designed to prevent shipment of unlicensed cream into the District of Columbia, the report suggested a standard milk ordinance "which would safeguard the two-fold purpose of adequately protecting public health and interfering as little as possible with the free flow of dairy products."

To supplement it, a system of Federal inspection might be developed in order to designate those States up to standard and thus eligible to ship dairy products

D.C. to Offer Own Plan of Reorganization

Project Differs From Griffenhagen Report on Boards, Commission

A substitute plan for reorganization of the District Government, differing sharply with the Griffenhagen proposals, has been approved by the Commissioners for submission to Congress tomorrow, it was learned yesterday.

Their plan, Commissioner Hazen said, includes:

Retention of the three-man commission, as opposed to the council of five to seven members and a city administrator as proposed in the Griffenhagen report.

Continued independence for the Board of Education and the Board of Library Trustees, rather than the subordination of these boards within the 17 executive departments as suggests in the Griffenhagen plan.

Consolidation of District government functions, but with fewer than 17 executive departments recommended in the Griffenhagen report.

The plan was approved late yesterday by Commissioners Hazen and McCoach, Corporation Counsel Seal, Maj. Daniel Donovan, District auditor, and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways. The proposals will be presented to the House sub-committee on District reorganization, headed by Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, at 10 a. m. tomorrow, during the opening hearing on District reorganization.

Hazen said the detailed reorganization report approved by the District officials would be withheld until it is presented to the subcommittee.

Earlier Hazen said many suggestions in the Griffenhagen report would prove useful. He said emphasis should be given provisions on which there is general agreement. The plan for abandoning the independent school and library boards, he said, would "never go through," due to the extreme controversy these suggestions have produced.

Bell Asks Relief From Duties as Budget Director

By International News Service.

Daniel W. Bell prefers to serve in his regular post as commissioner of Treasury accounts and deposits, and has asked President Roosevelt to relieve him of his duties as acting director of the budget, it was learned yesterday.

Bell told the President, it was indicated, the double task was too much for one man. He took over the budget post on the resignation of Lewis Douglas.

Swain Picks Jail Lock to Keep Date, Then Returns to Cell

A 32-year-old Washington man who picked jail locks, walked out to keep a date with his "dream girl" here and then returned to jail before he was missed last night presented a new headache for police of Falls Church, Va.

They couldn't figure out what to charge him with, so he was locked up again on the original charge, reckless driving, to await a "talking to" from Mayor L. P. Daniel, of Falls Church.

The undaunted swain, Earl Senter, of a Thomas Circle address, was arrested Sunday afternoon by Falls Church Officer C. B. Runyon. Police placed him in a cell in the rear of the small police station to await trial.

But Senter had a date and Senter is not the kind to keep a young lady waiting. Calmly opening a small pen knife the police had overlooked, he picked the cell door lock and strolled through the vacant police offices. Outside, he hailed a bus to Washington.

Four hours later Policeman Herbert Knox, on duty at the Falls Church police station, was jolted out of his midnight reverie by Senter's jaunty approach through the front door of the station.

"Well, they put me in jail, but nobody told me I had to stay. I had a date in Washington," Senter explained.

House G.O.P. May Adopt Byrd's New Economy Bill

Senate Project Seen As Weapon Against Warren-Cochran Reorganization Plan

By Robert C. Albright.

A new reorganization bill calling for drastic cuts in expenditures and proclaiming a "serious emergency exists by reason of continued national deficits" yesterday was reported by a special Senate reorganization committee.

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, chairman of the group, placed the measure on the Senate calendar while the House was still debating the Warren-Cochran compromise merger bill designed to "eliminate controversial elements."

House Republicans at a conference last night immediately seized on the Byrd measure as ammunition for a fight on the pending House measure. Republican Leader Martin said there was "strong sentiment" at the conference to offer the Virginian's plan as a substitute.

A small group of veteran Republicans advised against this, and favored going along with the compromise House legislation.

The Byrd bill makes economy, rather than efficiency, the chief objective of reorganization, provides elimination of Federal "functions" as well as agencies, and carries the so-called Wheeler amendment imposing a Congressional check the President has indicated he never will accept.

Sponsors Hit Republicans

The Senate move took by surprise House Democratic leaders who were striving to eliminate intraparty and bipartisan differences from the pruned and sharply modified measure now before the House. Conservative House Democrats have thrown their support to the Warren-Cochran measure, but Republicans split and called last night's conference to talk over minority strategy.

In appeals for prompt passage of the House bill, Chairman Cochran, of the House reorganization group, and Representative Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, author of the bill, turned their fire on Republicans for "walking out" and stressed the danger of "unrestrained bureaucracy."

Warren told the House his measure is a nonpartisan effort to reorganize the "veritable hodgepodge" of bureaus, duplications and waste in the present Federal service.

"We have created a vast bureaucracy that has become a Frankenstein monster greater than Congress, its creator, and arrogantly and contemptuously is flaunting itself and snapping its fingers in our very faces."

Charges Partisanship

Warren assailed Representative Taber, of New York, and Representative Gifford, of Massachusetts, two of the three Republican committee members opposing the bill. The North Carolinian said Taber would attempt to amend "the plan of salvation" and Gifford would "vote against the Ten Commandments if proposed by a Democrat." He appealed to Republicans to reject their views.

Cochran said no Administration official was consulted in preparation of the House compromise. He said its sole objective was "the reduction of agencies" and curtailment of a growing bureaucracy "which would ultimately destroy the Government itself.

"The President expresses a willingness to make the executive branch, for which he is responsible, efficient," said Cochran. "We should accept the challenge by passing this bill and providing the way for him to do so."

A House vote on the measure is not expected until late today or tomorrow.

The Byrd bill differs from the Warren-Cochran House measure

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

(One of the youngest Senators, just promoted from the House, is personable, soft-spoken. 36-year-old Worth Clark, of Idaho, whose colleague is the veteran Borah. Senator Clark's guest column today gives you a clear glimpse of the difference between House and Senate.—HARLAN MILLER.)

By D. WORTH CLARK
Senator From Idaho

FROM HURRY TO LEISURE

A little over a month ago I slipped quietly away from my small office on the south side of Capitol Hill—dropped my title of Congressional Errand Boy, and settled down in a three-room suite, with fireplaces, in the Senate Office Building.

Sen. Worth Clark
. . . promoted

I say "slipped quietly away" because I left the House-side of Capitol Hill with several pangs of regret, for I would no longer be closely associated with some of the finest gentlemen, truest friends and ablest legislators it has ever been my privilege to know.

* * * *

I had become—by the grace of God, and the electorate of Idaho—a member of the most exclusive club in the world, the Senate of the United States of America.

As a Congressman I sometimes opened my own mail, answered the telephone, and took care of numerous other details when my two secretaries were extremely busy, and that most of the time. Now my staff of five has eliminated me from those privileges.

* * * *

My desk, in a large and imposing room, has three telephones and an intricate buzzer system which brings any one of the five running. I only had one buzzer and one phone in the House.

When the bells rang to call the House in session, 435 of us used to dash on foot through the subway. Now I'm whisked over to the Capitol in a subway trolley car.

"—buzzers for all five"

In the House we rushed. We rushed with our work in our offices. We rushed with our business on the floor. Sometimes, I might say, we even scrambled to get things done. There were 435 of us, each representing one district, and all of us trying to get something special for that territory.

* * * *

We had to rush, because we didn't have six years in which to do it. It was never long until the next election. Looking back I can see that we were obviously pressing in everything we did.

* * * *

The House, like a highly geared streamlined machine, grinds up great masses of legislation, which comes to it from the smaller committee sorting machines. Few bills survive the final process. Time is limited. Speeches are cut to five minutes, and except on rare occasions no one listens to you.

* * * *

The Senate, more like a debating society, is deliberative. It turns out the same product, and as rapidly, but the machine itself is not geared in the high ratio. When a Senator gets the floor it's his, and nothing except sheer exhaustion can remove him.

"—only exhaustion can remove him"

The Senate, on the surface, is leisurely, composed, dignified, and yet the Senators themselves work just as hard. There are only 96 of us trying to get things done—not 435, and we have five people in our offices to help us instead of just two. We ride in subway cars.

* * * *

We have riding pages from the Senate Post Office to run our errands, and we don't wait for an elevator because we can push the bell three times and the elevator is there. Yet, we have more correspondence, and each of us has an entire State to represent. In the Senate I have six committees—in the House I had one; but we don't rush.

* * * *

But after all, we have the important things in common—the House and Senate. We face the same problems; study the same legislation; represent the same people; have the same worries; and we are all trying to represent those people and these United States in the very best way we know how.

Highest Court Hears Plea to Tax Officials

Jackson Supports New York's Right to Levy on HOLC Lawyer

The Administration yesterday carried to the Supreme Court its campaign for Federal taxation of State employes' incomes as Solicitor General Jackson appeared before the court to support efforts of New York State to tax the income of an HOLC attorney.

Jackson and Henry Epstein, solicitor general of New York, both asked the court to reverse a decision of the New York State Supreme Court, which had annulled the action of the State tax commission in denying the appeal of James B. O'Keefe, examining attorney for the HOLC, for a refund of taxes paid the State on his 1934 income.

NLRB Case Ignored

Irwin Arnovitz, chairman of the Utah Tax Commission, yesterday opened his argument in another case involving the right of Utah to tax the salary of an attorney for the RFC and Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation of Salt Lake City. The court will continue hearings on the Utah case today.

Earlier yesterday the tribunal refused, without explanation, to review a Ninth Federal Circuit Court decision upholding an NLRB ruling which required the Carlisle Lumber Co., of Analaska, Wash., to reinstate 147 discharged employes and pay them $185,000 in back wages.

Jackson, appearing in the O'Keefe case as a "friend of the court," was subjected to prolonged cross-examination in which six of the seven justices present participated.

President Would Pay

Making no distinction between "officers" and "employes" of the Federal Government, the Solicitor General said he hoped to see all Federal servants subject to State income taxes.

"Would that apply to the President?" asked Justice McReynolds. "I should like it to reach even to him," Jackson replied.

If the exemption from income tax is assumed to be a bonus offered as incentive for entrance into public service, Jackson demanded to know "why the Governor of New York, for instance, should get an 8 per cent bonus, while lower paid employes get less or none at all?"

State Position Narrower

Epstein's argument was that New York State was entitled to tax O'Keefe's income because the HOLC is not an "essential" arm or instrumentality of the Federal Government.

Daniel McNamara, jr., representing O'Keefe, disputed Jackson's argument that Congress has made no effort to extend the Federal income tax to State employes only because of uncertainty as to judicial interpretation.

Since the issue has been under discussion 25 years, he said Congress would have acted if it had any intent to do so. Until it does, State levies would be illegal, McNamara argued.

Justice McReynolds, ranking member of the court in point of service, presided as Chief Justice Hughes was confined to his home with a slight cold, missing his first court session on account of illness since appointment in 1930.

Shoppers League Indorses Labor's Boycott of Nazis

The Washington League of Women Shoppers yesterday indorsed labor's boycott of German goods but deferred positive action to a future date.

The league also went on record in favor of restoration of the $150,000,000 WPA cut.

The executive board of the Washington League will meet this afternoon in the home of Mrs. Lawrence M. C. Smith to hear a report on whether the league should support the hotel strike in Washington.

Elliott Roosevelt Hits ICC on Freight Rate Inequalities

Fort Worth, Tex., March 6 (AP)—Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, assailed the Interstate Commerce Commission tonight for what he termed failure to meet the freight-rate discrimination problem.

He warned that unless the problem were faced at this session of Congress, Texas would consider it a black mark against the ICC and the Administration.

His remarks, most pointed of any in several talks he has made on the freight-rate question, were broadcast by a transcription. He is in Washington.

Dentists From Five States Convene at Mayflower

Five State Post Graduate Clinic on Dentistry was in convention yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel. Among those attending were (left to right) Brig. Gen. L. C. Fairbank, chief of the United States Dental Corps, who made opening address; Dr. James W. Brown, president of District of Columbia Dental Society; Dr. P. C. Lowry, vice president of American Dental Association, and Dr. C. Willard Camalier, past president of the A. D. A.

Bad Wisdom Teeth Blamed For 'Nerves'

Dental Clinic Learns 'Third Molar' Is Real Trouble Maker

If you can't stand your wife's nagging, don't get a divorce but see your dentist.

It may be only an impacted wisdom tooth that is setting your teeth on edge, for according to Dr. Paul J. Aufderheide, of Cleveland, Ohio, here to address the Five-State Post-Graduate Dental Clinic, impacted wisdom teeth can cause an endless list of nervous disorders, perhaps even insanity.

Though the connection between insanity and wisdom teeth has not been proved, Dr. Aufderheide told reporters yesterday, many college students have failed their examinations because of lack of a dentist's care. The "third molar," as the wisdom tooth is known to the profession, may press upon the inferior dental nerve and set up neurotic troubles producing pains in the back, gastritis, or simply a general disinclination to work.

The clinic opened yesterday morning with short speeches of welcome by James W. Brown, president, District of Columbia Dental Society; J. K. Jennings, general chairman of the meeting, and Woodson T. Birthright, chairman of the clinician's committee.

5 Officials Meet To Co-ordinate U.S. Spy-Chasing

Five ranking intelligence officers of the Government conferred secretly at the State Department yesterday on furthering co-ordination of the Administration's drive on foreign spies, ordered by President Roosevelt.

The conference was held in the office of Assistant Secretary of State George S. Messersmith, who has been designated co-ordinator of the drive, which began after conviction in New York last summer of several Nazi spies.

At the conference were Read Admiral Ralston S. Holmes, chief of Naval Intelligence; Col. E. R. Warner McCabe, chief of Army Intelligence; William W. Howes, First Assistant Postmaster General; Elmer L. Irey, intelligence chief, Bureau of Internal Revenue, and Thomas McGuire, chief of the criminal division of the Justice Department.

On Capitol Hill

By the Associated Press.

The Judiciary Committee yesterday recommended Senate confirmation of Dean Charles E. Clark of Yale University Law School as a Federal circuit judge.

CLARK

President Roosevelt's nomination of the Yale dean has been pending in the Senate Judiciary Committee for more than two months while Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, made a study of Clark's "support for the court-packing bill." Austin said this study had convinced him Clark deserved Senate confirmation.

The 49-year-old dean was nominated January 5 to a vacancy in the Second Circuit, which includes Vermont, Connecticut and New York.

Senator Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, interrupted a witness at a committee hearing to ask if he would object to having the word "kids," used by the witness, changed when the official reporter transcribed his notes.

"It is very distasteful to a lot of people to have children referred to as 'kids,'" Davis said, and I know that it is to me."

Later he told reporters there was a "very active" organization devoted reform on that particular point.

Secretary Ickes indorsed a proposal to set up a permanent Department of Public Works but said some Government agencies now administering heavy construction programs might fight the plan.

Ickes testified before the Senate Unemployment Committee on a bill by Chairman Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, to overhaul the existing relief setup.

Ickes told the committee "the question of unemployment isn't a temporary thing. I am afraid we are going to have it more or less as a permanent problem," he added.

The witness said he was "heartily in accord" with the proposed creation of a new department, but he doubted that the WPA, the National Youth Administration or Civilian Conservation Corps should be brought under a new public worke deparmtent. He said functions of the CCC might be divided between the Agriculture Department and the Interior Department.

President Roosevelt sent to the Senate for confirmation the nomination of Joseph T. McDonald, of Scranton, to be collector of Internal Revenue for the Twelfth District of Pennsylvania. The President also reappointed A. Raymond Raff as collector of customs at Philadelphia and Austin J. Mahoney as collector of customs at Rochester, N. Y., both subject to Senate confirmation.

President Sees Labor Peace Groups Today

Plain Talk Expected At Session Arranged By Secretary Perkins

Acting on unity pleas from 1,000,000 workers, President Roosevelt today will lay before the two major labor factions the question of peace or continued war.

The second attempt of the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations to settle their differences will get under way at a White House conference at 2:30 p. m.

Secretary of Labor Perkins has made an appointment with committees of three representing both factions to meet her at the White House at that hour. She will escort the conferees into the President's office for a 30-minute talk on the necessity for ending the three-year feud.

The conference, Miss Perkins said, will be "entirely informal." This is taken to mean the President will do some plain talking on the subject of mutual injury caused by labor strife, as well as the damage and obstruction to the innocent bystander—business and the public.

Miss Perkins said no effort would be made to outline a formula for a merger of the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. The factions themselves, she suggested, are sufficiently aware of the seriousness of the problem to attempt to work out a settlement on their own accord.

The President, it was explained, will "give his blessing to the negotiations" and emphasize how anxious he is for a settlement.

Lowell Thomas To Talk Tonight

Lowell Thomas, radio commentator, will give a lecture for the benefit of the Children's Emergency Home in Constitution Hall this evening. Thomas was prevented by illness from keeping an engagement here in February.

Homer Rodeheaver, singing evangelist, will take part in the program, as will also the Columbia Broadcasting quartet and the Marjorie Webster School quartet.

Miss Howorth to Speak

Miss Lucy Howorth, of the Board of Veterans Appeals, will address a meeting of the Federal Bar Association at the National Press Club at 12:30 tomorrow. Robert Freer, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission and bar president, will preside.

Roosevelt To Insist on Full Relief

Renewed Request for Added $150,000,000 to Precipitate Showdown

President Roosevelt told Democratic leaders yesterday he was determined to press his request for $150,000,000 more for relief despite the Congressional economy drive.

At the first legislative conference since the President's return from fleet maneuvers, leaders were advised the Administration probably will submit next week estimates for relief funds Congress failed to appropriate.

This action was expected to precipitate a showdown on spending slashes proposed by Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, and others, as a contribution to business recovery.

Morgenthau Invents Slogan

Mr. Roosevelt was said to have reiterated his intention not to ask for any new taxes or reform measures and to seek an early adjournment of Congress. He was said to have indicated that Administration efforts toward co-operation with business will continue.

In this connection Treasury Secretary Morgenthau called on Treasury officials to recommend ways of aiding business. Behind his desk was a placard, asking in bold print, "Does It Contribute to Recovery?" He said copies of the placard would be posted in other Treasury offices.

Other developments on the "business appeasement" front:

Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier who has been influential in Democratic councils, was entertained at luncheon by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina. Vice President Garner, Majority Leader Barkley, Senator Harrison and a half dozen other Senators interested in economy moves were present. The luncheon was described as "purely social."

House Republican Leader Martin in a radio address called on the President to submit to Congress "at least one specific recommendation calculated to give substance to the glowing promises made by Secretary of Commerce Hopkins at Des Moines, Iowa, ten days ago." Martin said "eloquence alone never balanced a budget."

Eccles Backs Spending

The Federal Reserve Board, headed by Marriner S. Eccles, said in its monthly bulletin that "greater public expenditures" are needed to start a business upturn. The spending factor was one of three mentioned as necessary to a further growth in activity. The others were increased home building and larger outlays for plant equipment. The bulletin said industrial production now is about even with national consumption.

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Idaho, in a statement, asked Secretary Morgenthau to issue up to $1,330,000,000 in additional silver certificates on the basis of unused bullion in the Treasury "as a means of curtailing in some measure the country's mounting public debt."

Called to the White House for the legislative conference were Vice President Garner, Speaker Bankhead, Senate Majority Leader Barkley and House Majority Leader Rayburn.

Following the conference, Bankhead told reporters the policy of the Administration will be to do everything it can to help business, without abandoning social reforms.

"No Change" in Policy

"I think the President, the Administration and Congress all are interested in co-operating with business toward getting it off what might be called dead center in the matter of investments," Bankhead said. "There has been no change in Democratic policy. This Administration, as I see it, never has been opposed to business."

The Speaker said the Iowa address of Secretary Hopkins, recovery proposals by Secretary Morgenthau and Administration assertions that no new taxes are in prospect, should assure business of "new co-operation on the part of Government."

"I see no reason why business should not go ahead. There certainly is a legitimate field for investment all over the country."

Rayburn said the President again indicated he had no new legislative proposals to submit to Congress. The House leader predicted an early adjournment.

Senate Leader Barkley said he expects the President's estimates for another $150,000,000 for current relief costs next week in line with the intention recently announced in a Presidential message. Both Barkley and Rayburn said the economy drive opened last week by Senator Harrison was "not gone into." Rayburn said the House "already is cutting expenditures.

Friends Deny Amlie Plans To Quit Fight for ICC Job

Thomas R. Amlie, appointed by the President to the Interstate Commerce Commission, has no present intention of withdrawing his name from Senate consideration, friends of the Wisconsin Progressive said last night.

The President is known to have been urged to withdraw the controversial appointment and reports had been current recently that Amlie himself would withdraw.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley said he told the President yesterday it was impossible to say how the Senate will vote until hearings on the appointment have been printed and circulated.

A recent informal poll taken for the leadership reputedly showed odds heavily against Amlie's confirmation.

Meantime, Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, chairman of the Senate sub-committee considering I. C. C. nominations, called a meeting of his group for tomorrow, with J. Haden Alldredge, of Alabama, the President's latest appointment to the commission, before the committee.

Senator Reed (Republican), of Kansas, will question Alldredge. Immediately following the hearing, an executive meeting of the group will be called to determine the date of a vote on both nominations. The committee has decided informally to take the confirmation vote on both nominees at the same time.

New PROMPT RELIEF FOR HEAD COLD DISTRESS!

When your nose feels big as a house—stuffy and congested—a few sniffs from the new Vapex Inhaler will help you feel comfortable, and more able to keep going during the day and evening.

The new Vapex Inhaler works on a very simple principle. As you breathe deeply, you draw into your nose and throat the comforting vapors of Vapex. You feel relief from the misery of nasal irritation and you help clear the nasal air passages to permit easier breathing.

If you want to be happier while you keep "on the go", have a Vapex Inhaler tucked in your vest pocket or purse, for use when your nose annoys you. Vapex Inhaler retains its strength for months . . . Recharge it yourself, with Vapex Inhalant.

Gallinger Aid Costs Firemen 5-Day Week

House D. C. Unit Recalls Bill Already Reported, Puts Hospital First

In a move to "save" money that could be applied to reforms at Gallinger Hospital, the House District Committee yesterday recalled a bill to give a 5-day week to Washington firemen.

Representative Schulte Democrat), of Indiana, chairman of the sub-committee which last week asked favorable action on the measure, declared the hospital to be the "big emergency" facing the District.

"I don't think we should spend for anything else until that is cleared up," he said. "To give the firemen shorter hours would cost something like $500,000 a year. The House is in no mood for such an addition to the budget. Even if it were, the hospital should come first."

Tax Hearing Opens Today

Hearings on the Gallinger situation will be continued at 10 a. m. today, while hearings on proposed tax legislation for the District will begin at 10:30 a. m. and on the Griffenhagen plan for reorganization of the District government tomorrow morning.

Rufus S. Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association, last night issued a statement of "gratefulness" to the House District Committee for recalling its action to give firemen a shorter week.

"If this additional amount must be spent" he said, "there are many District services, which are entitled to consideration before adding about 3½ cents to the tax rate to give our firemen a five-day week; something no fire department has in the United States."

Economy "Mood" Stressed

Other committee members joined Schulte in his opinion that no such legislation as the firemens' bill has a chance in Congress this year.

"The mood is economy and all the Congressmen know that. Despite what is said in Washington firemen and policemen are better paid than they are in other cities. The conditions here are good" Schulte declared.

Representative Seccombe (Republican), of Ohio, declared the committee should not be guided too much by what it knows the Budget Bureau "is going to do."

"We know, he declared, "that it is not going to approve of anything we do this year, if it means money.

"I am not in favor of rescinding any action that means keeping firemen from getting better working conditions," he said. But when assured the Gallinger matter was more pressing and that the firemen's bill had no chance, he agreed to the committee action.

Hazen Denies Settlement

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday denied any "settlement of the Gallinger controversy" has been reached and announced the commissioners might take up the matter at their regular meeting this morning.

He expressed hope a special report by Richard MacKenzie would be ready for consideration at the board meeting, and said no decision would be made until the report was ready.

Reports the District heads had decided to recommend that administrative procedure at Gallinger be returned to the "visiting doctor" basis of a few years ago drew the ire of Representative Bates (Democrat), of Kentucky.

Office Workers' Wage Rules Mailed

Copies of the Minimum Wage Board's new regulations, which go into effect next Monday, have been sent to more than 500 employers, Miss Gwen Geach, secretary, said yesterday.

The order provides a $17 minimum for office workers, laboratory technicians, telegraph, telephone operators, and a work week of 30 to 44 hours. The same wage for a 40 to 48 hour week is set for elevator operators. Maids and cleaners receive a minimum of $14.50 for a 40 to 48 hour week.

Dry Tortugas Proposed as Alien Prison

Persons Facing Death If Deported Would Be Kept on Gulf Isle

Copyright, 1939, by International News Service.

Restoration of Fort Jefferson on Dry Tortugas, an island in the Gulf of Mexico, to hold deportable aliens who face death in their own countries, was suggested yesterday to Secretary of Labor Perkins by Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of New York.

Kennedy wrote a letter to Miss Perkins in which he recalled that she testified before the House Judiciary Committee recently that, in issuing warrants of deportation, in many cases she was issuing the equivalent of death warrants.

"Miss Perkins apparently gave that as a reason for not deporting some aliens, who, because they have criminal records in their own countries, face possible execution," Kennedy said. "At the same time, these criminal aliens have no right to freedom in this country, especially when they are here illegally.

"I believe we should select some place away from our mainland to hold criminal aliens, who would be executed if deported, and who are a danger and a menace to our Nation if allowed to remain here.

In his letter to Miss Perkins Kennedy wrote he was "seriously concerned about that group of law violators who should be deported at once because they constitute a serious menace," adding:

"I believe that these aliens should be deported at once or, in event they cannot be deported for some good reason, they should be kept in place under Government supervision until such time as the existing crisis is over.

"Such a place I have in mind is Dry Tortugas, on which is located Fort Jefferson, now abandoned. This island is a bird sanctuary and is located in the Gulf of Mexico, 65 miles from Key West and 125 miles from Cape Sable.

"I believe, at a small cost, this island could be converted into an ideal place in which to detain deportable aliens. This island is referred to in the book entitled 'Isles of Romance,' by George Allan England and, in my opinion, it would be an excellent place because of its location and because of its other resources."

Dry Tortugas once was a haven for pirates of the Spanish main. Fort Jefferson was built in the early part of the last century as the Gibraltar of the Gulf, and later converted into a Federal prison. Dr. Samuel Alexander Mudd, who treated John Wilkes Booth's leg, after Booth assassinated President Lincoln, served many years on Dry Tortugas.

D. C. Revenue Plan to Close Gift Loophole

Levy Included to Catch Evaders of Inheritance Tax

A gift tax, designed to close existing "loopholes" in the local estate and inheritance taxes, has been included in the new "streamlined" revenue structure proposed for the District, it was learned last night.

Hearings on the new revenue plan, developed to meet recurring annual deficits in the District, will open today before the sub-committee on fiscal relations of the House District Committee. Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, is chairman.

The tax program before the committee was planned to yield a maximum of $13,200,000 revenue mainly from a combined income-sales tax, a corporation income tax and elastic real estate tax.

Rates and exemptions provided in the gift tax would be the same as those in the inheritance tax, officials said. Class A gifts, which would include those made to parents, children, spouse or direct lineal descendants, would be subject to a 1 per cent tax, with a $5,000 exemption.

In class B, covering gifts to a brother, sister, nephew or niece would be taxed 3 per cent on the assessed value above an initial exemption of $2,000. For other personal gifts, a $1,000 exemption and 5 per cent tax is provided.

Martin Faction In UAW Slams Door on 'Isms'

Bars Reds, Nazis and Fascists From Office; Chief Virtual Dictator

Copyright, 1939, by International News Service.

Detroit, March 6.—Followers of Homer Martin in the United Automobile Workers Union today slammed the door on Communists, Fascists or Nazis.

Delegates to the factional convention whooped through a constitutional amendment barring all adherents to foreign "isms" from holding union offices and giving the union a right to ban any prospective member for similar views.

The action was in line with charges hurled by Martin against the C. I. O. which caused his break with the parent organization.

International president of the U. A. W., Martin asserted Communists were attempting to seize control of the union and he revolted when his suspensions of the suspects was overruled by John L. Lewis.

The amendment was carried unanimously and given a two-minute ovation by more than 400 delegates.

It came close on the heels of several steps which indicate Martin proposes to maintain the faction as an indpendent union without affiliation with the A. F. L. as had been predicted.

Martin Made Dictator

These steps included cutting the number of international executive board members from 24 to 13 and cutting the number of vice presidents from five to one.

The president was given supreme power except at times when the executive board fo the convention is in session.

The credentials committee report claimed an official representation of more than 115,000, with an unofficial representation of many thousands more.

Dr. Code Urges Recognition of Franco by U.S.

Would Increase Our Popularity in South America, He Asserts

Emmitsburg, Md., March 6.—The Rev. Dr. Joseph B. Code, of Catholic University, declared tonight immediate recognition of the Spanish nationalist government would strengthen American intercontinental solidarity.

Dr. Code spoke before students of Mount St. Mary's College and Seminary, and St Joseph's College for Women.

Recognition of the Franco government would not only be a gesture of friendship to the Spanish peoples, he said, but it would be strong evidence of this country's sincerity in promoting the "good neighbor" policy. The majority of the South American countries have already recognized Gen. Franco as master of Spain, he said.

"If the United States is concerned over the possible influence of Germany and Italy in Latin America," he declared, "certainly it cannot afford to ignore the probable influence of Spain in the same area. A friendly Spain would do much toward insuring South American co-operation in New World matters."

Dr. Code said that recognition will do much to wipe out "the remembrance in the minds of the Spanish people of the unfriendly attitude of the majority of American newspapers and the unfortunate statements of some of our officials regarding the nationalist movement."

He also stressed economic advantages of immediate recognition, pointing out that England and France "are already receiving trade preferments" with Germany and Italy.

"The move of each one of these nations is predicated on self-interest, upon diplomatic and trade advantages," Dr. Code insisted. "Are we to continue our unintelligible policy regarding Spain and Spanish nations?" What is to be gained, especially from the economic point of view, to be among the last to recognize factual conditions and act accordingly?"

Poland, Britain Will Discuss Trade, Colonies

War Co-operation, Raw Materials Are on Agenda

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, March 6.—The colonial claims of Poland and the role that country might play in a European war involving her ally, France, will be discussed in London shortly by Prime Minister Chamberlain and Col. Josef Beck, Poland's foreign minister.

Chamberlain, in the Commons today, announced the impending visit, and said his government welcomed the opportunity of discussing "matters of common interest."

From other sources it was learned the agenda will cover three points of mutual interest:

Colonies and access to raw materials.

Increasing trade between Britain and Poland.

Possible co-operation in case of war.

Col. Beck is not expected to deliver an outright demand for colonies. However, Beck will make it clear that if there is to be a general pooling and redistribution of colonies, then Poland wants a share.

Chamberlain in the past has been disposed to return some but not all colonies taken from Germany.

Poland's aspirations for African territory may be subordinated in the talks to her more urgent need for cheap access to raw materials. Poland finds it difficult to gather enough foreign currency to buy the raw materials she desires—coffee for example.

A substantial increase in trade between Britain and Poland is likely to materialize. At present 25 per cent of Poland's trade is with Germany, on a barter and control basis. Poland would rather deal with Britain on the old-fashioned system of cash and credit. If Britain is not willing to promote such trade then the alternative is more trade with Germany.

New York, March 6 (I.N.S.).—Sheriff Cecil D. "Cotton" Johnson, of Van Zandt County, Texas, aided by five compatriots from the Lone Star State, today in Supreme Court obtained custody of a colored man accused of stealing six chickens three years ago back home in Canton.

The loser in the extradition hearings before Justice Peter Schmuck was Jerome Dixon, 34.

Johnson pointed out that Chicken-stealing was a felony in Texas which meant prison for from two to four years for stealing even one chicken.

The expenses of the traveling Texans are being paid with a $2,000 bail bond defaulted by Dixon. Dixon was in custody here on a minor charge.

N.Y. Legislators Urge Albany Graft Inquiry

Albany, March 6 (I.N.S.).—A resolution calling for a legislative investigation of "corruption" in Albany City and County as charged by District Attorney Dewey of New York, in his gubernatorial campaign last fall, was introduced tonight by Senator Arthur Wycks and Assemblyman J. Edward Conway, Ulster County Republicans.

Carol Landis, Actress, Files Suit for Divorce

Who Owns Fifteenth and Constitution Avenue?

The intersection of Fifteenth and Constitution avenue northwest (shown above) is land contested by two "rival" governments, District and Federal. Question of jurisdiction over the corner arose in Police Court at trial of a traffic case. An assistant United States District Attorney was prosecuting. Attorney for the defendant produced the District code which claimed jurisdiction over the intersection. Judge John P. House Republicans Inclined to Adopt Byrd's Reorganization Plan to Fight Pending Bill chiefly in the former's strong economy declaration and its provision for affirmative action by Congress on any Presidential merger proposal, but there were a dozen other major changes.

"Congress is anxious and desirous of a reorganization for economy, simplification and efficiency," Byrd said in a statement. "Under the Senate bill, all this can be accomplished without the surrender by Congress of essential authority to preserve the right in an orderly way to approve or disapprove vital changes in our governmental structure."

Four of the five members of the Byrd reorganization committee agreed at an early morning meeting to report the bill. They were Byrd and Brown, of Michigan (Democrats), and McNary, of Oregon, and Townsend, of Delaware (Republicans). Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, asked more time to consider the measure.

Opening with a declaration that an "emergency" exists because of the growing national deficit, the bill declares "it is imperative to reduce drastically Government expenditures." While the Warren bill gives the President discretionary power to transmit a statement of savings involved along with merger plans, the Byrd bill makes such a statement mandatory.

The Senate bill specifies no reorganization order shall become effective until both Houses adopt a joint resolution specifically approving. It provides for a vote within 20 days after introduction of the amendment. Thus, if one House failed to approve a merger order, it would lapse.

The House bill, on the other hand, provides the President's orders shall become law within 60 days unless specifically disapproved by concurrent resolution. After ten days, any member of either House could move to discharge the committee in order to assure a vote. Thus, by majority vote, both Houses could block a merger order, but action of both Senate and House would be needed to do so.

It is this provision which House Republicans are attacking. Following the House Republican conference, Martin said he and a large body of Republicans will vote against the bill, unless the so-called Wheeler amendment method provided in the Byrd bill is substituted. Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, said he will offer the entire Byrd bill as a substitute for the House measure.

Other variations between the Senate and House plans:

The House bill limits reorganization authority to January 21, 1941 (the term of President Roosevelt), while the Byrd bill would make the authority permanent.

The House bill authorizes six $10,000-a-year administrative assistants asked by the President, and the Senate bill strikes this out.

The Byrd bill exempts only independent regulatory agencies from reorganization orders and strikes out exemption for the Coast Guard and the Army Engineer Corps provided in the House measure.

The Senate bill provides independent agencies may continue to prepare their own budget estimates, while the House bill assigns this authority to the Budget Bureau.

The Byrd bill further would allow the President to recommend abolition of functions or policies, in which field, the Brookings institution reported, lie the greatest field for merger savings.

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, chairman of the regular Senate Reorganization Committee, was said yesterday to favor the Cochran-Warren bill now before the House, to the Byrd measure. The Byrnes committee, which handled reorganization legislation in the Senate last session, has not acted.

throughout the country, it was suggested.

Such statements as "buy home-State products first" and "keep your dollars at home" were said by the report to constitute "an incitement to boycott the products of other States." Insofar as such advertising is heeded, the report said, it has an effect similar to an import duty.

Advertising appeals on behalf of farm products, it continued, should be designed to increase the demand for all of a crop rather than emphasize the part grown in a particular State.

In addition to the trade losses caused, the report said, "State trade barriers, regardless of their merit, certainly are a strain on neighborliness, and State trade barriers that are erected without regard to their merit are potential invitations to destructive repraisals."

"Resentment" that spread through the cotton-producing States at imposition of heavy taxes on margarine in the dairy States was cited.

Federal action may be necessary, the report said, if reciprocal agreements are not forthcoming against motor vehicle laws that restrict commerce in farm products. Use of Federal grants-in-aid to modify such laws was proposed. The report suggested a stipulation that no further registrations could be required of any vehicle properly registered in its home State and carrying an I. C. C. registration.

Roosevelt Gets Hebrew Medal For Tolerance

Praised for Awakening Country's Conscience On Religious Liberty

President Roosevelt yesterday was told he has done more to "awaken the conscience of this country" to the defense of religious principles than any man of his generation.

In a brief White House ceremony, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, bespeaking the common sentiments of Christianity and Judaism, extolled the President's promotion of world tolerance and bestowed upon him the American Hebrew medal in recognition of Mr. Roosevelt's promotion of better understanding between Christians and Jews.

Religious Freedom Cited

Johnson, former NRA administrator, told the President:

"Your political followers, and those who disagree with you, had no hesitation whatever in making this award. It represents their conviction that you have done more than any man to reconcile the silly differences of the separate faiths of Jews, Catholics and Protestants, to universal brotherhood in the fear and love of God."

The President accepted the award, with gratitude "for the broad spirit of good-will which prompts its bestowal," and added:

Calls Nation a Unit

"Embodied in the Federal Constitution and ingrained in our hearts and soul is the national conviction that every man has an inalienable right to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience."

The award committee list included Bernard M. Baruch, Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, Charles M. Schwab, Bishop William T. Manning, William Allen White and Carrie Chapman Catt.

"If trouble comes," Johnson told the President, "the world may know from this how your country will unite to support you."

Jones Proposes Delay in Maturity Of Rail Securities

By the Associated Press.

The House Judiciary Committee received a suggestion from Chairman Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, yesterday that railroads be permitted to postpone the maturity date of their securities if two-third of the holders approve.

He expressed opposition to a pending bill which would make such alterations conditional upon approval by 75 per cent of the security owners, contending this figure was too high.

A similar view was expressed by J. E. Shatford, of Washington, who described himself as a representative of an association which, in turn, represented holders of about $2,000,000,000 in railroad obligations.

Stimson Warns U. S. Cannot Stand Aloof From World Troubles

Terms Present Foreign Policy Road to Peace

American ideals of life. On this point I think that the statements of the President in his January address to Congress and of Secretary Hull last year are sound and timely.

These great and fundamental issues are now being widely discussed. The policy of the Government has been sharply criticized. It may not be inappropriate for me to attempt to analyze some of these criticisms and what seem to me to be the answers to them. By way of premise I fully recognize that this problem of war prevention has become much more serious and difficult by the setback to world co-operation for peace and by the growth of international lawlessness which has taken place during the past decade. But that does no relieve us of the problem. We must still face it and solve it if possible.

Meddling Criticism Scored

One very common objection to such an affirmative policy of our Government is in substance that we are needlessly irritating and antagonizing nations with whom otherwise we might safely live in peace and that we are meddling with what really does not concern us. These critics say that Democracies have lived in the same world with autocracies before; therefore they should be able to do so now. I think that the fundamental error involved in this objection is an imperfect appreciation of the basic aims and methods of the so-called Fascist governments, by which term I mean the three nations united by the so-called Berlin-Rome-Tokyo axis.

Recent history has thrown much light on these characteristics, but even now it is hardly appreciated what a complete reversal of the whole trend of European civilization they represent. If all the modern fascism meant were a system under which a nation voluntarily submitted itself to an autocratic ruler and under him was willing to live quietly and at peace with its neighbors, we might agree that it was a domestic matter which concerned that nation alone, and that it was not our business to meddle with it.

But it is becoming every day more clear that fascism is not such a system. On the contrary, it is now evident that it is a radical attempt to reverse entirely the long evolution out of which our democracies of Europe and America have grown, and that it constitutes probably the most serious attack on their underlying principles which those principles have ever met.

Taught to Scorn Freedom

We know now that the inhabitants of those countries from childhood up, by means of meticulous and absolute government control and by the skillful use of modern engines and methods of mass propaganda, are being taught to reject freedom; to scorn the principles of government by discussion and persuasion instead of force, and to despise the neighboring nations which practice such principles.

We now know that those Fascist nations have created a skillful technique for foreign aggression and that they are in fact girded under virtual martial law for threats and, if necessary, for acts of force upon their neighbors.

In succession the attacks upon Manchuria, North China, South China, Ethiopia, Spain, Austria and Czecho-Slovakia have shown us the error of likening modern fascism to a domestic system with which the rest of the world could live in peace.

Furthermore, fascism has involved a serious moral deterioration; an increasing and callous disregard of the most formal and explicit international obligations and pledges; extreme brutality toward helpless groups of people; the complete destruction within their jurisdiction of that individual freedom of speech, of thought, and of the person which has been the priceless goal of many centuries of struggle and the most distinctive crown of our modern civilization.

Such a loosening of the moral and humane ties which bind human society together gives powerful confirmation of the basic unfitness of such a system for organized international life.

Lincoln Saying Holds True

It strongly suggests that in our modern interdependent world Lincoln's saying holds true, that a house so divided against itself cannot permanently stand.

Today the neighbors of a Fascist nation are compelled to live in anticipation of immediate forceful attack. Such a situation is obviously the reversal of all civilized international society as we have known it in the past.

Today, instead of the family of nations being composed of states whose individual sovereignty is mutually recognized and respected, it also contains a powerful and united group of states armed to the teeth which is continually threatening and attacking some of its neighbors.

Does any thoughtful man believe that inaction or soft words from us would prevent similar attacks being made against the United States today if a Fascist government believed that such attacks would be useful and could be carried through with success?

On the contrary, it is now clear that we are confronted with serious danger which will exist until the liberal movement regains its faith, its courage and its momentum, and until the people of the Fascist nations themselves become convinced of the futility of their systems and compel the necessary changes.

Confused Thinking

Today those people are so shackled by censorship and controlled by government propaganda that no early change can be anticipated. It may be delayed until economic or military disaster compels it, but in the meanwhile the danger of a general war hangs over us.

The prospect is as somber as it is without parallel in our experience. The danger is as formidable as it is imminent. In my opinion it can be successfully resisted only by the far-sighted readiness and co-operation of the nations which are opposed to such a system.

Another objection to an affirmative policy by our Government is that it will drag us into war. This is an objection which seems to me to be based partly on confused thinking and partly on emotion—or, to speak plainly, on undue timidity. It is true, as history has shown, that if a general war actually takes place we shall very probably be ultimately dragged into it.

When war has once begun, the combatant nations become so desperate and so reckless that, however cautious we may be, our rights and interests will eventually be so trampled upon that our people will insist on defending them by force.

But that is not the present question. What we are discussing now is the prospect of preventing such a general war from actually breaking out. That is an entirely different matter.

Even if they are impervious to moral reasons, these aggressive Fascist nations understand very well the possible dangers as well as the possible advantages of force and they may be deterred from beginning a war by timely and vigorous warning of the dangers which they will thereby certainly incur.

Even more important, peaceful nations may be encouraged not to make surrenders which will ultimately endanger our safety, if they now receive from us in advance encouragement and actual assistance which it lies within our power to give them.

No one realizes more strongly than I do the uniquely secure position, geographically as well as in the possession of vital natural resources, which the United States occupies today. Today we are more nearly self-contained than any other nation in respect to the raw materials necessary for making war, and today we are also practically safe from that new terror of war—the bombing of large cities from the air.

How Shall We Use Advantage?

But the question now is, having these unique and powerful advantages how shall we use them? Having this present security from attack, how shall we conduct ourselves in this threatening world?

Shall we bury our heads in the sands of isolationism and timidly await the time when our security shall be lessened and perhaps destroyed by the growing lawlessness around us?

Or, shall we use our present strength and security from attack to throw our weight into the vacillating scales in favor of law and order and freedom?

Today our Government can with safety speak unwelcome truths to a dictator or do unwelcome acts, which it might be extremely hazardous for a weaker European neighbor of the dictator, either to do or utter. Recent events have indicated that such activity by us may produce extremely wholesome reactions in the cause of peace. On the other hand it is far more inconceivable that a threatened or devastated France or Britain or Holland might be forced to cede to a Fascist nation some of its possessions in the Western Hemisphere or in the Orient or make commitments to that nation which would be even more dangerous to our safety. Would our position be bettered by idly waiting for that to occur?

There is a flood of reaction and violence overrunning the world today. Our faith is that this is temporary; that the great progress of many long centuries will not be permanently lost, but that after the social and economic dislocations caused by the great war are readjusted, the progress in freedom and in the humanities will be resumed.

In the meanwhile and until the present violence has spent its force that flood must be held back from overwhelming us. During that interval each liberty-loving nation which stands confident in its own strength and freedom is a strong point of defense. But that defense is not complete unless there is created among all such nations the fullest sympathy and encouragement as well as a readiness to assist to an extent proportionate to the danger.

Opposed to Neutrality

What I have written may explain why I am unalterably opposed to the doctrine preached in many quarters that our Government and our people must treat the nations on both sides of this great issue with perfect impartiality; that, for example, we must sell to a nation which has violated its treaties with us as well as trampled upon the humanities of our civilization the very instruments with which to continue its wrongdoing quite as freely as we sell to its victim the instruments for its self-defense.

I am opposed to such doctrine because I am confident that we are confronting an organized attack upon the very basis of our civilization, and because I know that this civilization was only achieved by the development of what we call law and the humanities; by the respect for justice and fair play to all men; by the principle of the sovereignty of reason rather than force and by the Christian principle of the equal value of all human personalities.

Such a civilization can only be preserved if we keep alive in our people their faith in these underlying principles. And I see no surer way of destroying their faith than by teaching them that in such a conflict as is now going on in the world neither they nor their government shall discriminate between right and wrong, between an aggressor and his victim, between an upholder of law and a violator thereof.

Cannot Sacrifice Principles

How can we expect to keep alive in our citizens the principles which have produced our civilization and upon the continuance of which rests the hope of a future rule of law and justice in the international world, if we now sacrifice those principles to a motive of timid expediency and a desire to make the present easier at the expense of both the safety and the moral character of the future?

I have outlined the fundamental principles upon which I believe that an affirmative foreign policy for this Government can safely rest. I am clear that in such a policy today lies the best hope for the prevention of a general war.

But the prevention of war today is not as easy nor as certain as it might have been if the nations of the world, including ourselves, had followed during the past 20 years wiser and more co-operative courses than we actually did follow.

Therefore no matter what we now do or do not do we can not ignore the fact that our effort to prevent such a war may fail. We can not ignore the fact that at almost any moment an armed attack may be aimed by the Fascist group of powers against the vital safety of one of the two peace-loving nations upon which today rests in large part the safety of our own civilization—Great Britain and France.

Involve Both Nations

Such an attack would almost inevitably involve both of those nations and from present appearances would be co-operated in by all three of the Fascist powers. In that event only one course could be depended on ultimately to save the present hard-earned civilization upon which our own national welfare rests.

Today the aggressive group is more powerful in the air and on the land than even France and Britain combined and it is probably sufficiently strong at sea to pin down the British and French fleets to European waters, leaving exposed to the powerful Japanese fleet the whole western Pacific Ocean, including the English speaking dominions of Australia, New Zealand and even western Canada, as well as the Naval base at Singapore which is the key to the protection of those regions.

The defense against such joint action in Europe and Asia by Fascist powers can only be securely accomplished by the common action of the naval power of the three large democracies, including the United States.

Isolation Disastrous

Should anyone of these three nations attempt to remain isolated, the result would bid fair to be ultimate disaster to them all; on the other hand conviction on the part of the Fascist powers that such common action was in contemplation would be very potent to prevent the attack altogether.

We are prone to forget that the defensive policy of peace-loving nations like ourselves must always have not one but two main objectives; our Secretaries of State and foreign ministers must not only endeavor with all their might to prevent their nations from being dragged into war; but, secondly, and quite as important, we must endeavor to make sure that if, contrary to its desire, our country is dragged into war, it shall go in under such conditions that it will not lose but win the war; that it will not be exposed to the worst evil of all—ultimate conquest by a brutal enemy.

Sir Edward Grey, former foreign minister of Great Britain, has told us in his memoirs how for nine long years before the great war he labored for these two objectives against the constantly growing menace of Prussianized Germany.

He labored assiduously for a better understanding with Germany which might prevent war, but precautions were also taken, looking toward military co-operation with France in case he were unsuccessful in this first objective.

Consultations took place between the military experts of Great Britain and France to insure that, if Germany ultimately made war against them, the fleets and armies of those two nations could act in co-operation with a minimum of confusion and delay.

There Was No Alliance

There was no alliance. In fact explicit record had been made, that the conversations of the military experts should not constitute an obligation to render armed assistance on the part of either nation; and when war came France did not know until the British Parliament met on August 3, 1914, that they would actually have full British assistance.

But on that fatal day when Edward Grey's hopes of peace were falling into ruin about him and he knew that he had failed in his desperate effort to prevent war, he also knew that these vital steps had been taken for military success in the war which was being forced upon him.

Subsequent history quite clearly showed that except for these prudent plans of co-operation, not only on the outbreak of war might the British fleet not have been united in its commanding position, but the first great sweep of the German armies in France might have been successful.

Today the German mailed fist has far less velvet concealing it than in the years preceding 1914.

And the German power is flanked by two other strong nations which speak the same language of force and use the same methods. It is not a time for America to forget the lessons of such a recent past.

Domestic Policies Attacked

In what I have written I have been happy to express my approval of certain recent acts and statements of the foreign policy of the present Administration. I regret that this approval cannot extend to certain acts of its domestic policy. These last seem to me to be in conflict with the foreign policy in which I concur.

In his January address to Congress the President truly stated that the success of a national foreign policy depends upon having behind it a strong and united people.

But national strength is not promoted by an extravagance which comes dangerously near the impairment of our national credit. It is not promoted by discouraging the business welfare of the country upon which depends the economic power of the Nation.

It is not promoted by novel and haphazard experiments with the Nation's finance.

National unity is not promoted by appeals to class spirit. Nor is it promoted by methods which tend to disrupt the patriotism of either party or the effective co-operation of the two, upon which the co-ordinate working of the American Government depends.

In carrying out a foreign policy adequate to meet the emergency of the present world the President should have the support of all parties and citizens. If he will disregard both the annoyances and the temptation common to the policies of normal times, and if he will confine himself to the proven paths that lead most surely to political unity and economic strength, I believe he may win that support.

But he must lead toward that accomplishment. No other can.

Gandhi Sinks; Viceroy Acts To Avert Crisis

Exchange of Views Stirs Hope of Settling Dispute in India

By the Associated Press.

Rajkot, India, March 6.—Messages exchanged by the British Viceroy of India and Mohandas K. Gandhi brought hope tonight for solution of an impending political crisis growing out of the rapidly weakening Nationalist leader's "fast unto death."

As Gandhi ended the fourth day without food physicians said his heart condition would not stand the strain much longer.

Gandhi's wife, Kasturibhai, was released from the Rajkot jail, despite rejection of a previous offer of freedom, and went to his bedside. Gandhi yesterday had ordered her back to jail, where she had been held for a civil disobedience campaign.

Optimism Noticed

E. G. Gibson, British resident agent of the western Indian states, talked with Gandhi, but said only he had explained "our point of view."

The frail ascetic, who hopes to gain administrative reforms in Rajkot state, exchanged messages today with the Marquess of Linlithgow.

Contents were not disclosed, but informed circles viewed the correspondence with optimism.

In the last 24 hours Gandhi's blood pressure has risen to 185, an increase of 17 points since he started the fast. He has lost 2 pounds in weight.

1,000 Pray for Leader

Physicians said the 69-year-old leader, who lay on a rustic cot on the veranda of a native dwelling, was so exhausted that any attempt to sit up caused giddiness. A thousand peasants prayed outside his quarters.

It was believed that if the fast continued the Congress Party governments in power in 8 of the 11 provinces of British India would resign. Governors then would have to administer the provinces personally since no other parties are strong enough to form governments.

Cabinet Meets on India

London, March 6 (U.P.).—The British cabinet met in emergency session tonight and discussed urgent representations from India regarding unrest in Rajkot and possible repercussions to Gandhi's fast.

New Anti-Red Pact Avoids Alliance, Japan Indicates

Special Cable to The Post.

Tokyo (Tuesday), March 7.—Negotiations for strengthening the anti-Comintern Pact between Germany, Italy and Japan are understood to be nearing conclusion.

The prospects are that a pact of mutual assistance will emerge rather than a projected military alliance.

The Japanese have held out against alliance which would automatically involve them in a European war and have insisted the pact should be only "anti-Comintern" instead of being aimed against all outsiders.

Japan to Enlarge Navy

Tokyo (Tuesday), March 7 (U.P.).—A program designed to make the Japanese Navy "equal to any afloat" was announced by Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita today after the cabinet approved the supplementary military budgets. These included an initial appropriation of $16,380,000 for the contemplated five-year naval building program.

Navy Minister Admiral Mitsumasa Yonai told the House budget committee more money would be needed at once "in event international friction should develop."

He referred to the possibility the United States may fortify Guam and otherwise extend its naval power in the Pacific Ocean.

Leopold Dissolves Parliament, Raps Belgian Politics

Brussels, March 6 (AP).—A letter condemning Belgian politics was sent by King Leopold to Premier Pierlot today a few hours after the King had dissolved Parliament on the advice of his ministers.

Complaining of misuse of the executive power, the letter said the King "often has been obliged to sanction decisions in which he had no part."

Pierlot resigned February 27, a week after he had organized a new cabinet. The King declined the resignation and kept him in office until after the new parliamentary elections April 2.

Navy Employe Executed by Italy

Rome, March 6 (AP).—Antonio Scarpa, Italian naval employe, was executed at dawn today for military espionage. A former Austrian naval officer of Trieste, he was shot in the back after having been degraded.

Two accomplices were sentenced to life imprisonment and two others to 30 years.

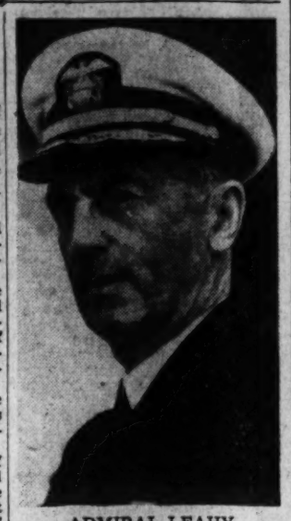
Admiral Leahy Plans to Seek Retirement When Congress Quits

Chief of U. S. Naval Operations Will Be 64 Years Old in May



ADMIRAL LEAHY

Admiral William D. Leahy, Chief of Naval Operations during the troublesome last three years, said yesterday that "barring a war," he will apply for retirement when Congress adjourns.

Back from observing the United States Fleet maneuvers with President Roosevelt, the Navy chief declared:

"The fleet is in fine shape. The submarines and destroyers showed especially well during the maneuvers. Our distribution and types of ships are satisfactory. The only lessons learned are that we need additional bases in the Caribbean."

A base in Puerto Rico and "some additional facilities" at St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands should be provided, he said.

Asked about the vulnerability of the Panama Canal as determined from the recent war games, the chief of naval operations said that its defenses "were very strong."

While Admiral Leahy will be 64 years old this May, he as chief of naval operations is not subject to the Navy mandatory retirement law. With Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff of the Army, scheduled for retirement this summer, it had been expected that the President would not want to replace his chief defense advisers at the same time.

fense, but that he wanted to prevent the Government from losing "a great many millions of dollars."

Barkley offered an amendment to deny contracts under the arms program to companies refusing to comply with the labor relations act.

Five Amendments Filed

Other amendments which must be disposed of before final action on the bill are: (1) by Senator Clark, to limit expenditures under the bill to $170,000,000 for planes and $130,000,000 for other aviation expenses; (2) by Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, to limit aviation expenditures to $300,000,000; (3) by Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, to place no limit on the number of planes to be bought, as asked by the War Department; (4) the Tobey amendment; (5) by Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, to give colored persons equal treatment in aviation training.

Members of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee were divided on the question of air facilities at Guam, as committee consideration of the $65,000,000 base measure began. Although the Guam project was stricken in the House, the Senate group is considering the Administration plan in its original form.

Top Cost $200,000,000

"The opposition has in general been based on the assumption that what is really intended is the fortification of Guam so as to make it an important and strongly defended naval base for airplanes and submarines," Admiral Leahy declared. "This is not the case; the only improvements contemplated at the present time are the building of a breakwater and dredging to improve the seaplane takeoff area and minor preparation for handling planes."

Leahy admitted the island has "great potential value" as a "possible air and submarine base from which to protect our overeas commrece," and a possible base for the Asiatic Fleet when the United States withdraws from the Philippines.

Expenditure of $80,000,000 would make Guam difficult of capture, he testified, while for $200,000,000 a base there could be made impregnable.

The Senate vote to increase the authorized strength of the Army Air Corps to 6,000 planes, follows:

NaziArmament Rush May Open Jobs to Jews

Workers Needed To Replace Gentiles Drafted for Defense

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 6.—Jews and "Aryans" were under scrutiny by the German government today in attempts to tie over a labor shortage in rearmament and speed up production.

An order by Dr. Friedrich Syrup, president of the unemployed insurance board and labor department member, recommended Jews be employed in public and private businesses, reversing earlier decrees curtailing their business, professional and public life.

The order, however, specified Jews should work only where they were not likely to come in contact with gentiles. Some 4,000 jobless Berlin Jews and an undetermined number scattered over Germany may soon find employment.

It was stated Jews would not be put to work on any project considered essential to the defense of the nation. Instead, they will be used to fill the gap caused by transferring gentiles.

Road building, soil improvement, brick making and harvesting will be some of the jobs assigned to Jews. Officials of the labor ministry said the order of Dr. Syrup still was in an embryonic stage.

The labor office on February 16 was empowered to draft any worker who might be needed for tasks deemed urgent to the state.

Dr. Syrup's statement said Germany was "not interested in letting the working capacity of able-bodied Jews lie idle and leave them to be supported by charity."

A Labor Department spokesman said the order had no connection with negotiations with the Intergovernmental Refugee Committee.

(In London, Robert T. Pell, American vice director of the committee, planned to return to Berlin late this week or next to submit to the German government a detailed list of proposed future homes for 150,000 active young German Jews.

(Pell was said to be prepared to describe a scheme under which experimental Jewish communities would be established in British Guiana, the Dominican Republic, Northern Rhodesia and the Philippines.)

Mother's Standby in Treating
CHILDREN'S COLDS
Frequent

If your children keep coming down with nasty little colds all winter, use Vicks VapoRub these three simple ways.

✓ For relieving discomforts of chest colds and night cough rub VapoRub on throat, chest and back at bedtime. VapoRub's poultice-vapor action relieves local congestion—eases muscular soreness or tightness—helps the youngster relax into restful sleep.

✓ For coughing and irritated throat caused by colds, put VapoRub on the child's tongue. It melts, trickles slowly down—bathes the throat with soothing medication. Then massage VapoRub on throat and chest.

✓ For "sniffles" and misery of head colds, melt a spoonful of VapoRub in a bowl of boiling water. Have the child breathe in the steaming vapors. This loosens phlegm, clears air-passages, makes breathing easier. Also massage VapoRub on throat and chest. Millions of families use these three time-tested ways to relieve the misery of colds.

did into Barcelona after its fall January 26.—Editor's note.]

Franco's Burgos radio station replied that a surrender would find "justice" but warned that it must come immediately, without further resistance.

Communist leaders, ousted from the government and all positions by Casado because of their insistence upon a "fight to death," were fleeing from the Madrid-Valencia zone by the hundreds.

Suppressive measures were taken against the Communists, including the closing of their headquarters.

(Indications that the new loyalist regime would abandon its resistance were strengthened when the French admiralty announced tonight that 11 warships of the republican fleet, which fled from their Cartagena base Sunday during a revolt against Negrin, were en route to the French North African naval station at Bizerta. There they will be seized and interned).

Communists Rounded Up

(Frontier dispatches told of a swift roundup of Communist elements in Madrid, including the arrest of several hundred, after disclosure that Negrin had fled to France and that many Communists had escaped by boat and plane to French and North African ports).

Tonight's cabinet organization within the defense council made Julian Besteiro, moderate Socialist, the new foreign minister replacing Alvarez del Vayo.

Besteiro is an ardent supporter of the peace moves and both insurgents and foreign observers have hailed his support of Casado's revolt as a strong indication of armistice overtures.

Union Chiefs in Cabinet

Wenceslao Carillo, a leader of the Socialist U. G. T. trade union, became minister of interior, and Miguel San Andres, a Left Republican, was named minister of justice and propaganda.

Edouardo Val, a Socialist, became minister of communications and public works; Gonzalez Marin, of the Anarcho-Syndicalist C. N. T. organization, was named minister of finance and economy, and Jose del Rio was given the portfolios of education and health.

All except Del Rio are the members of the six-man national defense committee set up immediately after the overthrow of the Negrin regime.

Early Bookings Prove Vaudeville Much Alive

Loew and Warners Announce Ace Acts; RKO-Keith's Changes an Opening Date; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

SOMETHING ABOUT THE FLOWERS of vaudeville that bloom in the spring, tra-la.

There seems to be a good deal in the imminent stage bookings at the Capitol and Earle theaters to give rise to doubt that the variety stage has died an awful death. It may be in a slight coma, estimated on the basis of the former eminence of the two-a-day—if anybody can remember that far back—but there are so many sterling topline attractions gradually closing in on Washington that the outlook becomes peculiarly bright.

BELL

Beginning Friday, at Loew's Capitol, for example, John Boles, endowed with a voice that should have landed him in grand opera, will headline a stage revue bearing the title of "Hollywood Hi-Lites." Costarred on the same bill will be that peerless impersonator, dancer and comedienne, Sibyl Bowan, whose genial caricature of the First Lady is one of the classics of friendly burlesque.

Approaching F street in ensuing weeks will be Clem McCarthy, the lightning-tongued commentator, and on the same bill will be Lew Parker, fresh from appearances in musical comedy on Broadway. Another whom Washington will enjoy for the first time will be Buddy Clark, whose tenor voice has been a feature of the "Lucky Strike" broadcasts for several years.

Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians, one of the most versatile organizations known to stage, screen or radio, is another "name" offering that will be along in due course. Eddie Peabody, foremost of the banjoists, is still another.

These are said to be "only a starter" on the long list of distinguished entertainers that the Loew interests have engaged for the delection of Washington audiences during the spring and early summer months. Boy, bring up another paragraph!

With Benny Goodman and His Orchestra and Kay Kyser and his announced as early headline features on the Earle stage, Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner interests in the Washington territory, yesterday listed another ace band to put in an early appearance on Thirteenth street. This is the effulgent entertainment unit presided over by that veteran of the keyboard, stage, screen and radio, Vincent Lopez, the fellow who is always "speaking." "Lopez, speaking," remember? On this visit, Mr. Lopez, whose favorite demonstration of his pianoforte dexterity is "Nola," will bring with him, as singing star, that former luminary of the screen, Patricia Ellis, who is said to have developed a vocal style that is as captivating as her blonde impersonations before the Hollywood cameras. In addition, the roster of Mr. Lopez's specialists will embrace Abbott and Costello, comedy stars of a popular radio hour. All seems to be well with the lovers of what remains of vaudeville.

A letter dated March 2, 1939, from Father Flanagan's Boys Home, at Boys Town, Nebr., has this, in part, to say:

"Dear Mr. Bell: Everybody hereabouts is convinced that Spencer Tracy is the greatest guy in movies, as well as being the great actor of 1938, because of his outstanding performance in 'Boys Town.'

"The reason that everyone in this vicinity, as well as in other parts of the country, believes Spencer the 'tops' is because, unannounced, he shipped, by air-express, to Father Flanagan, his 'Oscar' which was awarded him by the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences.

"The statuette, which weighs 7½ pounds and stands 12 inches in height, now bears two tablets with inscriptions written upon them. One inscription reads, 'Academy First Award, to Spencer Tracy, for his performance in 'Boys Town.' The other, which Spencer himself had inscribed, says, 'To Father E. J. Flanagan, whose great human qualities, kindly simplicity and inspiring courage were strong enough to shine through my humble efforts. Spencer Tracy.'

"I am sending you this information in the hope that you might be interested in knowing why people in this community believe Spencer Tracy not only a great actor, but a 100 per cent great guy."

There doesn't seem to be much that could be added to that.

. . .But important advices are not confined to the peregrinations of Gen. Farley's gray-clad leg-men. By wire comes this from Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's: 'Didn't somebody say something once about, the 'best laid plans of mice and men'? Well, it's true, for we find it necessary to switch our opening of the Fields-McCarthy-Snurd-Burgen feature, 'You Can't Cheat an Honest Man' from Wednesday to Thursday, March 9. Opening hour of 5:30 p. m., goes for Thursday.' So there it is and now you know.

Dots and Dashes

"Lost Horizon," Frank Capra's fascinating phantasy of the Utopian Shangri-La, lying beyond the snowcapped mountains of Tibet, will open a revival run on the Little Theater, beginning today . . . The stellar role is played by Ronald Colman, supported by Sam Jaffe, H. B. Warner, Jane Wyatt, Margo and numerous others . . . Just a reminder that "The Third Cross," a passion play by James J. Glade, directed by Payl Messink, will be presented for two weeks, beginning Sunday, March 12, in Holy Name Auditorium, Neal street and West Virginia avenue northeast . . . Thirty-five local players will take part in this Lenten drama . . . Final preparations are under way at Georgetown University for the second one-act play contest of the Mask and Bauble Club, to be presented in Gaston Hall on March 9 . . . Each class from the college, with the exception of the seniors, will be represented . . . Thanks to the Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy for a set of the new "safedge" glasses, in which they are merchandising their cottage cheese . . . All decorated with Walt Disney screen characters, they are very spiffy when filled with milk! . . . Danielle Darrieux, the lovely young French star, who scored so decisively with Charles Boyer in "Mayerling" and with Douglas Fairbanks, jr., in "The Rage of Paris," will be seen on the screen at the Belasco, beginning tomorrow, in "Abused Confidence" . . . In case you have been wondering, it is versatility that Mlle. Darrieux has . . . in addition to many other things.

WEDNESDAY NIGHT Stepin Fetchit heard of the Nation-wide editorializing of Eleanor Roosevelt's resignation from the D. A. R. because of the ban against Marian Anderson, the Negro singer . . . The dusky Fetchit proceeded to the Rainbow Room and tried to secure entrance. "We're sorry," he was told, "but we're all filled" . . . As a matter of fact, every table had been taken—because this was the premiere of John Hoysradt and Ruby Newman's band . . . The next night Fetchit again presented himself at the Rockefellers' Rainbow Room—and was served.

FRIENDS OF J. P. MORGAN are telling this story: Morgan phoned his nephew, Henry, and asked: "Where do you expect to be at 4:15 this afternoon?" . . . "I don't know yet," Henry answered . . . "Well," asked Morgan, "will you be walking along Riverside Drive?" . . . "Yes, I might be," was the reply . . . "Will you be walking along Riverside Drive—let's say, at 114th street?" . . . "Yes," Henry assured. "Why?" . . . "Very well, then," Morgan returned, "We'll be sailing by on the Corsair. We'll wave at you."

WEDNESDAY'S fights at Madison Square Garden proved to be a financial flop, and the promoters lost $4,000—all because of the boycott against the Garden for having permitted the use of its halls for a Nazi rally . . . Promoter Mike Jacobs, who is the principal sufferer, cannot quite understand why he should be the victim of this boycott. "What am I," he wailed, "a Guatemalan?"

AS SOON AS it became apparent that "The American Way" would be a hit, all the people associated with the production assembled to discuss devoting part of the proceeds immediately to aiding the refugees. "No, that's not the first thing we ought to do," one of them suggested—and his suggestion was adopted. . . . "The American Way is for us first to raise the salaries of the cast" . . . Kenneth MacNeal's accountancy book—which got him an assignment from Fortune magazine—will be published next month by the University of Pennsylvania Press . . . John Mosher of the New Yorker magazine was reminiscing of "the good old days when we first started the magazine" . . . "John," Dorothy Parker told him, "stop looking at the world through rose-colored bifocals."

WHEN MAYOR LAGUARDIA read a dispatch, reporting Goering's visit to Italy to inspect the air force, he discussed the occasion when the King of Italy presented two medals—one to LaGuardia, then a flying officer stationed in Italy, and the other to Gabriel d'Annunzio . . . "Your Majesty," said LaGuardia when he received the medal, "although d'Annunzio and I are both receiving medals, there is still no equality of justice. Because when he announces a new word they call it poetry; but when I announce a new word—they call it bad grammar."

. . . WILLIAM SAROYAN'S newest book, "Peace, It's Wonderful," will be published on April 1 . . . The following day his first play, "My Heart's in the Highlands," will be presented by the Group Theater—although Saroyan isn't quite sure about it . . . "Hope you get a chance to see the play before it closes," he wrote to a New York friend yesterday. "To be on the safe side, I suggest that you catch the first performance. But to be absolutely safe—see a rehearsal."

CONFIDENTIAL cables from Berlin point to March 15 as a most decisive day in the history of Germany . . . Dick Metz, who has been a big-money winner among the progolfers this year, won only $26 in the St. Petersburg tournament. He went to a movie after the final match, won $50 in a Bingo game—and then contributed the $76 to a local charity . . . Andre Simon, head of the British Wine and Food Society, for the first time in the society's history is bringing back to England an American dish which he says excels anything British. The dish is smoked turkey . . . Frankie Hyers of the 18 Club just returned from Miami and confessed: "I got cleaned at the racetrack" . . . "How much did you lose?" Jack White asked . . . "$4," Hyers answered. "Well," White consoled, "you couldn't have been very dirty.

Langdon W. Post, the former Tenement House Commissioner, lectured at the Rand School this week and discussed the political scene. . . . After the lecture he agreed to answer all questions . . . "You speak very kindly of politicians," someone reminded. "And yet, how do you reconcile that with the fact that you refer to yourself as a politician?" . . . "A politician," Post defined, "is only a live statesman."

THE NEW BOOK, "The Strange Death of Adolf Hitler"—a remarkable story which alleges that Hitler was slain shortly before the Munich pact and that a double now rules Naziland—came to the publishers originally as a 5,000-word document. An American mystery-story writer elaborated on the thesis, and spread it into a volume . . . "The Evolution of a Chorus Girl" routine, which will feature the Crystal Palace Exhibit at the Fair, will restore Little Egypt to her World's Fair prominence . . . Lew Leslie was an interested observer at the debut of "The Swing Mikado" here this week. In 1934 Leslie had a 40-minute "Jazz Mikado" as part of his "Blackbirds" revue, but eliminated it . . . This year "Swing Mikado" is a hit, and the new "Blackbirds" flopped.

Packed House Hails Hepburn In Barry Play

'Philadelphia Story' Proves to Be Brittle, Sophisticated Comedy

By Nelson B. Bell

"THE PHILADELPHIA STORY." The Theater Guild presents Katharine Hepburn in the new comedy, in three acts and four scenes, by Philip Barry. Directed by Robert B. Sinclair; designed and lighted by Robert Edmond Jones. Production under the supervision of Theresa Helburn and Lawrence Lagner, At the National Theater.

—THE CAST—

Edward ..... Philip Foster
Seth Lord ..... Nicholas Joy
Mae ..... Myrtle Tannahill
Elsie ..... Lorraine Bate
Mac ..... Hayden Rorke

Perhaps "The Philadelphia Story" might be most easily catalogued in the informed theatrical mind by saying, first, that it is spun from the same skein as that ebullient and earlier matrimonial comedy, "Forsaking All Others." It is not in any sense a carbon copy or an imitation of the play in which Tallulah Bankhead achieved one of her more or less major successes, but there is a distinct and pleasant analogy between the two.

The new Philip Barry comedy, in which Katharine Hepburn appeared for the first time in Washington on the stage of the National Theater last night, is a crisp, slightly daring and agreeably amusing tale of a rich young woman involved in the spicy complications of a second marriage, following a little too closely on the heels of her first.

Tracy Lord is an imperious and vindictive young divorcee, who poses as a chaste and impeccable goddess of wealth and social position until events induced by a little too much champagne on the evening before her wedding reveal qualities of human frailty that quite alter the course of her future life. She ceases then to live in an ivory tower and comes down to earth, accompanied by several others whose romanticisms are closely interwoven with her own.

"Get the Story"

The enigmatic title of the play is derived from the fact that a male writer and a female photographer are assigned by a national magazine to "get the story" of Philadelphia—historical, economic and social. For the social aspects of their revelations they choose to invade the home of Seth Lord, in the county near Philadelphia, where the eldest daughter of the household is about to embark upon her second matrimonial venture. Her fiance is a rising young tycoon of the coal fields up around Wilkes Barre—a thorough-going cad with a finely circumscribed future before him. Journalistic fruits appear to be ripe to pluck. And then the former husband appears on the scene, as do the estranged father of the household, an uncle, the magazine publisher and divers and sundry others whose devious machinations have direct bearing upon both the conduct and the point of view of the headstrong and youthful matron in whom the action of the three acts centers.

This action transpires in the living room and on the porch of the Lord mansion on the countryside. It involves deviations from the social code that in this day and age are condoned by all sophisticated playgoers. The dialogue is brittle and heavily sprinkled with speech that now seems to be affected by all strata of polite and impolite society. The whole matter is so shaped that its final climax and denouement can be vaguely foreseen by the initiate of the theater, but is no whit lessened in comic and dramatic effect on that account.

Miss Hepburn Triumphs

The character of Tracy Lord, assumed by Miss Hepburn with a retention of many of her characteristic mannerisms of both speech and action, is one that affords a wide range for the talents of a gifted young actress. Miss Hepburn's stature as a comedienne grows appreciably in her present part. Her single fault last night seemed to be a tendency to "press" her speeches and hurry her delivery to a point that sometimes abridged the speeches of her associates in the cast. Her personal triumph, however, was complete.

The star is surrounded by a supporting cast that reflects again the Theater Guild's judicious care in peopling its plays with players skillfully "typed" to their roles. Miss Hepburn may be said to have two leading men in her present venicle, in the competent persons of Van Helflin, whom we liked immensely—and still do—in "End of Summer," and Joseph Cotten, borrowed from the Mercury Theater. Both execute their tasks with fine effect. Vere Allen, as Mrs. Lord; Jason Joy, as the paterfamilias; Forrest Orr, former standby of the National Theater Players, in the comedy role of "Uncle Willie," and Dan Tobin, as Alexander, helpful brother of a sister in distress, are bulwarks of strength in the unwinding of "The Philadelphia Story's" intriguing and sprightly comedy-romance.

That Labor Law Again

We have no way of knowing what Lenor Lonergan might have been like in the role of Dinah Lord, the inquisitive younger sister. She was removed from the cast by the stringent requirements of the District's unfortunate child labor law. She would have had to be very excellent indeed to have surpassed the portrayal contributed to the well-balanced ensemble by Lorraine Bate, who moved up from the role of Elsie for the Washington engagement.

Robert B. Sinclair's direction and Robert Edmond Jones' settings add to the effectiveness of a carefree and capricious comedy that will cause Miss Hepburn's stock to soar in the theatrical marts.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Copyright, 1939, by International News Service.

Hollywood, March 6.—Historians hold such a divergence of opinion about Mary Todd, wife of Abraham Lincoln, that Marjorie Weaver, who has been given that role in "Young Mr. Lincoln," is sure to come in for criticism no matter how she plays it. By some, Mrs. Lincoln was pictured as a faithful, considerate wife, but others wrote of her as a shrew and a nag and the cause of the Lincoln-Douglas battle. Darryl Zanuck has his script all ready to start March 13 with Henry Fonda, of course, starring as Lincoln, and John Ford megaphoning.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Alice Brady was put under contract today to play Abigail Clay, mother of the two men Lincoln defended in the murder trial. It's a role reminiscent of the one she played in "In Old Chicago." I get a real thrill out of anything concerning Lincoln, for my home in Illinois was not far frome where he practiced law.

The next few months all Douglas Fairbanks, jr., has ahead of him is work, work, work. So if he is carrying the torch for Zorina, which I doubt, he won't have time to give his love life a thought. The minute he finishes "The Sun Never Sets," for Universal, he hurries to Paramount to play the lead in "Ruler of The Sea," Frank Lloyd's epic. Doug, jr., couldn't be happier over the chance to work with Frank, and he says that Rowland Lee has promised him he will make his scenes first in "The Sun Never Sets" so he can be free to play in the sea story.

George Brent, who has made love to Bette Davis in so many pictures lately, and Priscilla Lane, who has been Jeffrey Lynn's movie sweetheat so many times—get a change of partners. Warners think too much teaming is bad and so George and Priscilla will be the love birds when "Episode" goes into production. Seems only yesterday that I was talking to Jack Warner and he told me about buying this foreign-made picture, but actually it was a good two years ago. Probably the reason it was never made was because it dealt with pre-war Austria which has been such a hotbed of censorship, but now that Germany, Austria and Italy are such poor customers, it doesn't matter.

Flora Robson is every inch a trouper. Although she has been terribly worried about her mother, who is very ill in England, she refused to leave until all her retakes on "Wuthering Heights" were completed. Miss Robson is leaving today and there is a chance she may come back to play the housekeeper in "Rebecca," but she has a stage play waiting for her so she has made no definite promise. Miss Robson is such an important star in England, and the part of the housekeeper is so unpleasant, I wouldn't blame her if she turned it down.

Snapshots of Hollywood Collected at Random: The Lawrence Stallings welcomed an 11-pound boy today; Myrna Loy in the hospital trying to get rid of bronchitis; Reginald Gardiner finding solace at a spot where he goes nightly to hear Nonie Mitchell warble; Dorothy Lamour, chaperoned by Wynn Rocamoro, glimpsed with Bill Powell at the Brown Derby; Erroll Flynn's whereabouts still are a mystery that Warners would like to solve . . . his boat is anchored off the Cape San Lucas but no Erroll . . . Wonder if it's true Ronald Colman is asking for $250,000 and a percentage of the gross to play Ransome in "The Rains Came." If it is, I'll wager he won't play the part.

Margaret Roach is wearing a ring on her engagement finger but her parents say she isn't engaged to Robert Paige, her favorite boy friend . . . they were in the Roach party at the Turf Club ball; Hal, jr., brought June Lang . . . Rose Bisonette, who was escorted by Wesley Ruggles, is really a beauty; George Raft is buying three more race horses and we hope he will get a better one than Nadir, who has never even had a call; Frances Marion is entertaining with a supper party tomorrow night following the preview of "Dark Victory." Susan Ann, daughter of Jack Gilbert and Virginia Bruce, was 5 today, so her mother let her see her first movie; the Earl of Warwick hosted a party Sunday night in honor of the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland; the Frances Langford-Jon Hall luau had all the tenors in town, including Dick Powell, Allan Jones and Frank Parker. Jon knew just how a luau should be staged and this one was done in perfect style with a roast pig, poi and Tahitian music.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif, Mar. 6.—Has Hollywood gone social? Guy Charrington's party at Marcel LaMaze for Princess Torlonia and daughter, Donna Maria, was something Frank Shields has more than a passing interest in daughter, Leslie Howard's friend, Violetta Cummington, didn't like her place at table so changed her card to be next to Leslie, which amused Madeleine Carrol and Count Gregoroni no end. They never stopped chattering French the whole evening. Marlene Dietrich appeared with Tim Durant, a new combination. And, of course, Hedy Lamarr and Gene Markey were omnipresent.

HEDDA HOPPER

At David Selznick's social soiree the following night for Sir Adrian and Lady Baille and Joan Payson, the latest spring fashions were as mixed as the guest list.

The hostess wore tight cloth of gold pajamas. The socialites wore evening clothes. "Hollywood," wore mostly day dresses and sport clothes. It was quite funny, to say the least.

Sir Adrian had a slight accident and ate his dinner in shirt sleeves. A gooey sauce slipped. Merle Oberon and David Niven came together, which will revive something or other.

Darryl Zanuck tried out his magic tricks. Good, too. He even made the silverware disappear. I hope Mrs. Zanuck won't be embarrassed by finding it among her souvenirs.

Kay Francis arrived with Basil Rathbone—yes, Ouida Rathbone was there, too. Constance Bennett wore one of the shortest dresses. Vivien "Scarlett" Leigh didn't appear. Seems she won't attend social functions for fear of losing her Southern accent.

Joan Bennett hasn't yet gone back to her old hair. One of the prettiest there was Paulette Goddard, who gets younger each week. If she keeps that up they'll have to have a school teacher on the set when she begins "Dictators" May first. Charlie Chaplin and Elsa Maxwell huddled in a corner most of the evening. No, Elsa didn't make a speech—she hasn't collected for the last one yet.

Mrs Gary Cooper was stunning in black with tight, green satin embroidered basque. Gary, fed up with the sand dunes of "Beau Geste," glad to be back in civilization again. Lady Baille, mother of seven, and politically prominent in England, says her country is solidly behind Chamberlain. His greatest critics seem to be in America. She hinted delicately that we didn't quite print the truth about him.

The food, as well as the guest list, was cosmopolitan. It jumped from Chinese, English and French to American.

There were monocles, too. But not on the corn pone!

Next year there should definitely be an Academy Award for the best clothes on the screen. I'm sure Adrian would have won it this year for his Marie Antoinette. Clothes alone have been known to change a sourpuss into a film fan.

Now that Luise Rainer has arrived in Paris, we can unlax, and look forward to the next dramatized reunion and third honeymoon. Unless Odets gets another divine spell of stubbornness.

The latest Lloyd's policy was taken out by Marie Blake who's playing in "Blind Alley." The villain ties her up, she has to bite her way out. And she's just paid a hunk of money for new porcelain jackets—hence the insurance. Well, wouldn't you?

That super-deluxe salesman, Steve Hannagan, has turned up in town wearing the brightest smile seen hereabouts. He has more jobs than I have fingers, which seems to amuse him, instead of getting him down.

Love Comes to Andy's Aunt Milly

Love found Andy Hardy, but in the next picture of the series from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, the great emotion comes to Aunt Milly.

As a result of the script requirements for "The Hardys Ride High," Sara Haden goes glamorous for the first time in her screen career. She is receiving special attention from Adrian, the dress designer, and Jack Dawn, the make-up ace, is devising beauty treatments and hairdress.

China Builds 3d Air Fleet With Alien Aid

U. S. and Russian Instructors, Builders Rally to Chiang

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, March 6.—American and Russian equipment, personnel and advice are helping Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek develop a new air force—his third since the undeclared war broke out—to challenge Japan's mastery of the air.

China was credited with 600 military aircraft at the outbreak of the conflict. Three months after its first disastrous appearance over Shanghai, this force had been well shot out of the sky.

Ten months later, Chiang's second air force had been so weakened by combat losses and by a temporary withdrawal of Soviet Russian support it was unable to contribute to the defense of Hankow.

Turns to Foreign Friends

Now that the generalissimo has reorganized and settled his government and war machine in the far western interior, he has turned again to the Americans who stood by him from prewar days and to the Russians to build a new air force.

After surviving a severe bombing, the American owned and operated aircraft factory at Hangchow had to be dismantled and shipped to Hankow.

Needed for service as tactical and operations advisers in Nanking, American instructors at the Hangchow air school were forced to halt their systematic training of Chinese.

American Factory Reassembled

For six months after the loss of Nanking, Russian-manned and Russian-made planes did most of China's aerial fighting. The American factory reassembled in Hankow resumed production of warplanes, but the Russians preferred their own ships.

In the latter part of 1938 aditional instructors to aid in the task of building a new air corps arrived from the United States.

With the advance of the Japanese on Hankow, the American aircraft factory there again was dismantled and most of the personnel and equipment was started on the long journey to Yunnan province. A group of technicians went to a point in southern Yunnan where they began assembling a squadron of fast American-made fighters.

With these new ships and attack bombers built in Hankow before removal of the factory and a number of miscellaneous American and British planes as a nucleus, Chiang hopes to develop an air force manned by cadets trained by American instructors in the city of Yunnan.

Private Military Schools Essential Factors In U. S. Defense, Col. Woodward Declares

Founder of Academies' Association, Here for 26th Annual Convention, Cites Cadets' Training as Reserve Force

Private military schools are an essential part of America's national defense, according to Col. J. C. Woodward, attending the twenty-sixth annual convention of the Association of Military Schools and Colleges, which he helped found.

"I first had the idea of such an association as this in 1914 when it looked as though trouble would flare up in Mexico which might drag us along," said Col. Woodward yesterday. From military academies he received a generous response to his idea of forming an association to correlate military education with requirements of the War Department. The first convention was held in the Old Ebbitt Hotel in 1914.

In 1915 a House bill asking establishment of "sub West Points in strategic areas of the country" was killed in committee through the testimony of Col. Woodward, who pointed to the advantages of a military school system already established. The following year the military schools and land grant colleges of the country were designated by Congress as special Reserve Officers' Training Centers.

The War Department has appointed special instructors to train students in strategy, and Col. Woodward and his colleagues have obtained ten appointments to West Point for private school graduates. They hope this year to increase this number to 20.

"We train about 15,000 young men each year in the fundamentals of democratic citizenship, ready to give and take orders intelligently, citizen soldiers who know the horrors of war and will defend our country to prevent them if necessary." Col. Woodward added that few graduates of academies enter West Point, preferring professional life instead.

Symphony Deficit Spurs Search for Financing Method

Declaring it "practically impossible" to make up the $16,778 deficit in the National Symphony Orchestra's sustaining fund, Harold A. Brooks, director, yesterday called a meeting of orchestra association members and volunteer workers for 8 p. m. today in the United States Chamber of Commerce to devise a means of financing the orchestra's 1939-40 season.

Brooks said a compromise with musicians would be discussed, but that no curtainment of orchestra activities would be considered.

Japan Holds A Ghost Land, Chinese Says

Puppet Regime Made Up of and Rules Over Rascals, Visitor Asserts

Japanese armies are conquering only the ghost of a country—the land without the people—according to Hsueh-fan Chu, president of the Shanghai General Labor Union, recently arrived in America on a "good-will" tour.

All the rich and educated Chinese have left territory under Japanese occupation, Hsueh-fan said yesterday, leaving behind only the poor and those who cannot leave. "So the Japanese puppet government is composed of and rules over rascals," he declared.

Helped Fight Invaders

Hsueh-fan was in command of a battalion of 1,500 workers, men and women, from August to November, 1937, during the fighting at Shanghai. Volunteers, they helped raise spirits of the civilians as well as assist troops against the Japanese.

Almost without arms, they sallied against the invaders by night, "expecting either to destroy the enemy or die themselves," he said. Under those circumstances 900 of the 1,500 lost their lives in three months.

The Shanghai General Labor Union, of which Hsueh-fan is president, is affiliated with unions in 15 other provinces.

Evacuate Striking Workers

Representing one-fifth of China's 2,500,000 industrial workers, the Chinese Association of Labor encourages workers to defend their country, accelerates production for war-time needs, removes striking workers in Japanese-occupied territory to unoccupied lands in the south and west, and establishes friendly relations with foreign workers.

Bill to Transfer Army Land to Park Approved

Protected by 26 inspections and tests

Under supervision of the Sealtest System of Laboratory Protection

No food product in the whole world needs more constant and careful attention than milk to keep it safe and pure.

Our milk is protected at every step: Farms must be approved. Herds must be examined regularly by veterinarians. And, here in our fine dairy plant, every process is under the supervision of the Sealtest System of Laboratory Protection.

Twenty-six separate Sealtest inspections and tests guard our milk. Fat tests, acidity tests, bacteria tests, tests for cream volume, tests for flavor, tests for sediment, tests for temperature, inspection of all equipment, of employees' health . . . and dozens of other tests.

Only milk that is pure and wholesome, nourishing and delicious, could pass that constant scrutiny.

Wouldn't you like to try this milk that is so completely guarded? Just order from our milkman, ask at your favorite store, or telephone.

Listen to "Your Family and Mine," 5:15 p.m.—WRC

HOW LONG DOES IT TAKE YOU TO WASH A MILK BOTTLE?

Thirty seconds, probably. Well, it takes us thirty minutes in this great machine. First, it is given four thorough soakings in cleansing solutions to sterilize it. Next, it is scrubbed inside and out. Finally, it is given four successive rinsings. When a bottle emerges, it is scrupulously clean.

Practical Appeasement

Encouraged by the Administration's overtures to business, the United States Chamber of Commerce has come forward with a program for translating official assurances into action. The tone of the declaration is not altogether happy, however; indeed, it is rather reminiscent of the days when organizations of businessmen were accustomed to voice sweeping disapproval of New Deal legislation, thereby losing opportunities for helping to correct specific evils.

Everybody would agree, for instance, that "repressive laws and regulations" impeding the flow of capital and labor legislation which "promotes strife and discord" ought to be repealed or revised. But it merely creates irritation in official circles for the Chamber of Commerce to phrase its demands in language that implies a sweeping indictment of the Administration's policies.

Steps have already been taken to revise the tax laws with a view to alleviating the burden resting upon industry. Senator Harrison and some of his colleagues have also ranged themselves on the side of the economy advocates. That being the situation, it would be sounder strategy and it would certainly be much more conducive to achievement of tangible results for the Chamber of Commerce to applaud and encourage constructive moves in a restricted field instead of bringing forward a long list of grievances.

The chamber is of the opinion that public spending with its accompaniment of heavy taxation is one of the chief deterrents to risk taking. It asserts that taxation is reaching the point at which business cannot carry the load, and warns that "ultimately, if this course is continued, we shall have to decide between private enterprise and public enterprise."

Being of this opinion it seems all the more imperative for the chamber to concentrate its efforts upon control of spending instead of launching a scattered attack along several different fronts.

Delaying The FHA Bill

Unexpected opposition to the Wagner bill extending the authority of the Federal Housing Administration to insure home mortgages has delayed that measure in the Senate Banking and Currency Committee. The committee deferred action to hear adverse testimony from John H. Fahey, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, and representatives of building and loan associations.

The two chief objections raised against the FHA bill seem to be that it would permit that organization to continue indefinitely the refinancing of homes already in existence and would enable the FHA to continue insuring mortgages up to 90 per cent of the value of small homes. It is argued that the FHA was established to stimulate the residential construction industry and that it should not cut in on building and loan associations in the refinancing of homes.

No doubt there would be general agreement that the FHA should direct its activities largely to the financing of new construction. Last year 70 per cent of the mortgages it insured covered new homes built for owners, and included in the remaining 30 per cent were many new homes purchased shortly after completion and numerous other rehabilitated homes. It appears that the FHA is a relatively insignificant factor in mortgage refinancing.

Home refinancing last year, without FHA insurance, amounted to $1,300,000,000. Refinancing through the FHA system amounted to only $200,000,000, including cases of rehabilitation and new home purchases. Surely that volume of mortgage insurance is not sufficient to cause any serious alarm among sound institutions operating without the aid of the FHA.

Moreover, competition between the FHA system and the institutions served by the Federal Home Loan Bank may continue to have a salutary effect upon interest rates. The latter have been substantially reduced because of the large amounts of capital made available to prospective home owners on reasonable terms. Further progress in that direction is indicated by the recent slashing of certain mortgage interest rates to 4¼ per cent by a large institution in New York.

One entirely legitimate criticism of the FHA law now in effect is that the insurance premium of ¼ of 1 per cent now charged is inadequate to pay necessary expenses and build up an ample reserve fund. But the FHA is not asking for continuation of this rate, and in the absence of any legislation the rate will revert to ½ of 1 per cent next July. In effect, that will mean maximum interest of 5½ per cent on FHA-insured mortgages.

Loans up to 90 per cent might also prove to be too generous under some conditions. But that is not an argument against continuation of the effective work which the FHA is now doing. Congress may decide that it is not desirable at this time to double the $3,000,000,000 limitation on FHA-insured loans. It would be a real blow to recovery, however, if this organization should be denied ample authority for extension of its home-building program.

State Trade Barriers

Washington's concern over the alleged shipment of unlicensed cream into the city gives special point to the study of interstate trade barriers affecting farm products just completed by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. In this case interest centers chiefly in protection of local consumers against milk products not properly inspected. Behind this controversy, however, is a system of inspection practices that may be abused to the detriment of free trade as well as health.

The District law appears to be more flexible than the statutes of many States which restrict the privilege of shipping in milk or cream to dairies inspected by officials of the State into which it is sent. In practice, the bureau found, this arrangement may easily be used to protect local producers against competition from those of other States. New York, for example, bars milk or cream from Middle Western and Western States with the effect of increasing the price of cream in Manhattan.

Similar restrictions affect the flow of many farm products across State boundary lines. "Today," writes Secretary Wallace in a foreword to the report, "we cannot say that we have free trade between the States." The B. A. E. found that every State has indulged in restrictions of some kind upon interstate commerce in farm commodities. No single crop escapes these restraints. If the movement of commodities is not affected by discriminatory inspection fees, licenses and taxes, conflicting laws on the grading, labeling and packaging of food, they may be caught in the bewildering maze of quarantines and embargoes.

Laws governing motor trucking are in a state of grave confusion. Weight restrictions, for example, vary from 18,000 pounds authorized in Kentucky and Tennessee to 120,000 pounds in Rhode Island. Registration requirements and fees make operation of trucks across the boundaries of some States well-nigh out of the question. Kansas, Oklahoma and several other Western States have gone so far as to establish definite ports of entry, as though they were foreign countries.

The B. A. E. found 170 separate State laws dealing with grading and labeling of farm products. "Nonuniformity of grades and standards and regulations as among States," it concludes, "is a potential source of a multitude of annoyances and hindrances to trade in agricultural products." State quarantines were found to have rendered constructive service, although the investigators pointed out various defects in their application which should be corrected.

In a number of instances remedies appear to be easily available. For example, the Interstate Commerce Commission has set up uniform safety and equipment standards for interstate carriers which have now been adopted by 14 States. No argument would seem to be essential to extend that obviously sensible arrangement to all the States. In the case of milk, the bureau suggests adoption of a standard ordinance that would safeguard the public health, while interfering as little as possible with the free flow of dairy products.

By striking down the disguised Florida cement tariff last week, the Supreme Court gave impetus to the growing move against interstate trade barriers. But the most far-reaching steps remain to be taken by the States themselves, with aid and encouragement from the Federal Government where that is practicable.

It Still Is

Last week saw a movement which probably attained its maximum power at the outset. That was the attempt, sponsored by twelve Senators, to revive the so-called war referendum amendment which won considerable support in the House during the last session of Congress.

The twelve Senators have jointly introduced a resolution providing that before declaring war, Congress consult the wishes of the American people through a referendum "except in case of attack by armed forces, actual or immediately threatened, upon the United States or its territorial possessions, or by any non-American nation against any country in the Western Hemisphere."

The purpose behind this proposal is admirable. The twelve Senators want to keep the United States safe from embroilment in a foreign war, a desire they share with all sections and classes of the American people. However, the method they would employ to achieve this great and wholly desirable objective is as futile as it is ill-timed.

The most elementary demands of self-interest require that, in the present state of world affairs, the United States do what it can to help the forces working for peace and hinder and retard, so far as we safely can, the forces making for war. A war referendum amendment, by creating the impression abroad that the United States is determined on a peace-at-any-price policy, would encourage the would-be aggressors to discount this Nation as a factor in international relations. Fortunately, there is no reason to believe the present resolution will get even as far as did the Ludlow resolution at the last Congress.

During the past week the people of the United States have become more fully aware than ever of the representative nature of our form of government. They realize that for 150 years it has fully protected their interests, and continues to meet their needs today. To change the system with respect to the fundamental question of the powers of Congress to declare war would be a revolutionary departure unlikely to serve any useful purpose.

As Secretary Hull has pointed out, there was "no question more acutely in the minds and purposes of the founders of this Republic than that of keeping the American people out of war." Yet, "after the fullest deliberation, they reached the conclusion that the representative form of government by the people which they established was best calculated to accomplish this end."

On The Defensive

There was a decided and significant absence of the customary bluster and braggadocio in the speech made by Dr. Goebbels at the opening of the Leipzig fair. His remarks suggest that Nazi Germany, which appeared to be having it all her own way a few months ago, is today on the defensive. And the latest article by Virginio Gayda, Mussolini's journalistic spokesman on foreign affairs, reveals an equal degree of perturbation by the other member of the Berlin-Rome axis regarding the present trend of events.

Dr. Goebbels took occasion to attack "critical voices within our land" and to defend the "series of unpopular measures" which the Hitler regime has found it necessary to carry out recently. "We are in no wise responsible for the lamentable condition of affairs," he added. And he appealed to the outside world, notably Great Britain, to support Germany's economic efforts "because these seem particularly suited to decrease the causes of tension in Europe—which otherwise are too apt to increase."

The decidedly apologetic tone of Dr. Goebbels' speech makes it clear that Germany's internal situation is far from bright. Discontent is apparently becoming too widespread to be ignored or even effectively suppressed. At the same time, the decidedly stiffer attitude displayed by the democracies toward the totalitarian powers suggests that an easing of internal pressures through foreign adventures, as was done in the past, may prove difficult of accomplishment.

But if Germany's internal situation is critical, Italy's is, if anything, even worse. Having wasted her substance on foreign wars, the Fascist kingdom hopes to recoup at the expense of the European democracies. But the very ambitious defense programs of Great Britain and France, plus American willingness to help those powers re-arm, suggests that bluff alone may not this time suffice.

It is doubtful whether either Italy or Germany wants war, particularly a war of any dimensions. But if the totalitarian powers are to obtain the advantages of aggression without war, they must enjoy a sufficient preponderance of power to enable them successfully to intimidate the democracies. As it happens, the disparity that once existed between the armed might of the Berlin-Rome axis and that of the London-Paris entente is steadily being reduced. With their finances already severely strained, with their productive apparatus unable to carry any considerably increased load, the totalitarian powers find it increasingly difficult to keep pace with their rivals in the re-armament race.

No wonder, then, that Signor Gayda sees fit to accuse the democracies of "steering toward war." The charge is laughable. But it is significant that it is being made. For it shows that the dictators, who were responsible for the race in arms, are now being hoist by their own petard.

If Justice is blind, why does it so often wink?

Nearly all of us have considerable histrionic ability when it comes to acting the fool.

Another thing we'd like to know is when this country is going to emerge from the emergency.

So many crises are developing these days that we're usually from a week to ten days behind with our worrying.

The element of uncertainty is becoming more pronounced every day. According to recent reports, for instance, Einstein is beginning to doubt Einstein.

Rumors continue that Hitler isn't Hitler, but a couple of other fellows called Hitler. Can it be possible that even Germany's Reichsfeuhrer is ersatz?

War Secrets

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt was within his power to approve the sale of American airplanes to our friend France. We sell war material such as junk, machine parts, copper, mules and scrap iron to Japan, China and Germany. Airplanes are no secret; the French knew all the good and bad points about our planes compared to those of Germany.

Each nation knows what the other is doing and soon learns the other codes, we knew how many planes and tanks each side had in Spain. Americans are told, if they inquire about battleships or torpedoes from the Navy Department, that the department cannot give out confidential naval secrets unless special permission is given by the Secretary. Yet a British magazine published complete details of United States plans for a new type battleship.

For national defense the President should appoint a civilian board not connected with the munitions combine (Army and Navy officers have a fear of offending their superior officers in new ideas), reopen the naval ordnance plant at Charleston, W. Va., which cost $24,000,000; use the cheap TVA electricity and make lightweight airplane metal for standardized parts. This would give work to some of the 100,000 machinists out of work and save millions for the taxpayers.

Congress And The ADA

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to heartily indorse your editorial of February 26, entitled "Congress and the ADA."

I feel quite certain it expresses the sentiment of everyone who knows the condition of our alleys. Many of our great civic leaders worked faithfully and diligently for years to get a bill passed by Congress to remedy this disgraceful and deplorable condition. And now, when the administrator is progressing rapidly with his work and is desirous of doing a good job he should be given all the co-operation and assistance asked for.

It is much more economical to do all in our power to prevent disease and crime, to say nothing of the suffering and humiliation spared the poor human beings thus saved.

I have abiding faith in our Congress to always be ready to aid in relieving suffering, and am sure that the ADA will get the support asked for.

Saving The National Symphony

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Washington is having its usual trouble keeping her symphony alive. Each year it is the same old story. If the campaign this year is eventually successful, then next year the same difficulty will arise. The trouble is not that Washington does not want her orchestra, or that she is not proud of Dr. Kindler and of the wonderful work he has achieved in the eight or nine years that the orchestra has been with us, but that Washington by herself can not hope to support the kind of orchestra she would like to have. The money is not here.

The solution lies in expanding the sphere of the orchestra's influence, and within that sphere seek additional support. I refer to the city of Baltimore. Together Washington and Baltimore could support an orchestra of the highest rank. The orchestra could serve both cities obtain support from each without draining either. The best artists could be secured, the orchestra enlarged. The men could have a longer season and be paid more adequate wages. Both Washington and Baltimore would be immeasurably benefited from such an arrangement.

I believe that the National Symphony is the logical nucleus upon which to build this bigger and better orchestra. Money would be easier to obtain, and an endowment easier to start. Such an organization would be able to furnish summer concerts to the people of both cities. Of course it would be too much to hope for official support from the two cities in the form of a grant from the city treasuries for summer concerts. But if a grant could be obtained from each city of $10,000 for this particular purpose, then a campaign for a sustaining fund and an endowment fund could easily be raised in both Washington and Baltimore to cover all additional needs.

Why should Washington have to bear the entire cost of an orchestra that serves many other communities? These two great cities should awake to the possibility that together they could easily support the finest orchestra in the world.

A MARYLANDER.
Washington, March 1.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It appears that the National Symphony Orchestra has arrived at another crisis. The people of Washington obviously do not think this crisis any more pressing than at least six or seven others that have occurred, once each year during the life of the orchestra. They could not, knowing the danger of losing the symphony exists, permit this crisis now before it.

Perhaps this apparent lethargy, or unwillingness to respond to the call for help, is due to the fact that year after year stories are carried in the newspapers during the campaign for funds for the symphony about the pressing need, and so the public becomes immune to the cries for help. The public knows that for many years now the orchestra has always gone on. The same cry is always raised, but either the association has made its goal or proceeded without. Naturally they feel that it will go on, even without their contribution.

The crisis does appear each year, because the amount asked seems to be about the limit that Washington can produce. Is the ceiling of Washington's appreciation to be set at $100,000 a year? If so, Washington will have to be content with a second-rate orchestra, for it takes more to keep our symphony at the peak of perfection to which we have strived. I do not believe it is the ceiling. It may be necessary to try other ways of financing. Perhaps a definite plan for an endowment should be started, but the time for that will be immediately after this present campaign is finished with an oversubscription.

To carry this present campaign over the top, I would suggest that a gala concert be given—one similar to that given for the members some time ago—this one, however, to be paid for at from $5 a seat up. The men of the orchestra have much at stake, since their future with the orchestra is in jeopardy. They could donate their services for it, and a special drive be made among music lovers of Washington to buy tickets. I believe many business houses would buy tickets for a concert and give to the orchestra in this way when they could not be approached in any other way.

This, of course, will not solve the campaign problems for the campaign of 1940. There will be another crisis then, unless someone can evolve a plan that will bring the orchestra an independent income, and thus make it possible to be less at campaign time. I believe it is everyone's problem in Washington, and everyone should help to solve it.

Roman Rations

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The feature "Private Lives," by Edwin Cox, in your issue for February 24, contains the following surprising statement:

"Ardent New Dealist Henry Wallace always stands ready to be his own guinea pig. Reading that Caesar's men lived only on corn, he tried it, soon lost 12 pounds, reluctantly gave it up."

Mr. Cox writes about several things every day, so it is not surprising that he should have made a slip, but it is hard to believe that Henry Wallace could have made the same mistake. Be that as it may, the fact is that neither Caesar, any of his men, nor any other Roman, ever saw or heard of what we call corn, the real name of which is maize.

The "frumentum," on which the Roman soldiers conquered the known world of their day, was parched wheat. Maize, or Indian corn, originated in tropical America, and was, therefore, entirely unknown in Europe, or the rest of the world, until after the caravels of Columbus had reached the western shores of the Atlantic.

The word "corn" originally meant a small hard particle or grain, as of sand, salt, gunpowder, etc. "It thus came to be applied to the small hard seed of a plant, as still used in the words barleycorn, and peppercorn. In agriculture it is generally applied to the seed of the cereal plants. It is often locally understood to mean that kind of cereal which is the leading crop of the district; thus in England it refers to wheat, in Scotland and Ireland to oats, and in the United States to maize (Indian corn)" (Encyclopedia Britannica).

The Workers' Stake

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Merryle S. Rukeyser, in his column for March 1, takes issue with John Strachey's use of statistics in his recent book. By the use of figures Mr. Rukeyser tries to use the moth-eaten argument that the American worker has a stake in me quote Mr. Rukeyser ". . . evidence that 64,000,000 Americans own life insurance policies, 44,000,000 savings accounts and 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 own shares in American corporations."

More than three-fourths of the number of policies are industrial insurance (25 cents a week) and averages slightly more than $20 and the balance, ordinary life insurance, averaging less than $3,000 a policy. These figures are for 1929 and due to lapses and surrenders are undoubtedly much smaller now.

The bulk of bank deposits are time deposits which no worker can afford. Of deposit in mutual savings banks, where the worker does his business, when he has any, in 1930, 81 per cent of accounts averaged less than $1,000, accounting for less than 19 per cent of all deposits. 9 per cent of all accounts, averaging between $1,000 and $2,000, represented 17 per cent of all deposits. A thousand dollars in the bank would look enormous to any worker after years of unemployment, part time or WPA.

Mr. Rukeyser is conservative in his figures on shares in American corporations. I have seen as high an estimate as 18,000,000 stock owners in the U. S. Of course no one takes seriously any such ridiculous figures as being authentic. Due to duplication of ownership in different corporations, does Mr. Rukeyser believe that stock ownership tops a million individuals and does he believe that the worker stockholders amount to more than 1 per cent of this figure.

Lastly, can anyone believe that the workers, and by workers I mean those 85 per cent of income receivers who in 1929 received less than $2,000 annually (and much less now), can cut much of a figure in the ownership of industrial America?

Our New Law

WE WERE ALL delighted with our new Law when he assumed his duties at the first of the year. The new Law was a real man, we assured each other, six-foot-two at least, and broad in proportion. He was handsome, too, with wavy black hair and steel-blue eyes. Going for the mail in the afternoons became doubly exciting for the women of the village because of the probability of meeting him in front of the postoffice.

It was reassuring to meet the Law on the street, marching majestically first up the west side and then down the east side, pausing to read the thermometer in front of the drug store, commenting graciously on the weather with all who passed him, and touching his hat to all the ladies, who, by some strange coincidence, happened always to finish their shopping just in time to meet the Law at the door. Here indeed, we felt, was a figure to strike terror to the hearts of our village evildoers.

And so, all through the week, from the Monday morning when he began his duties right up till Saturday night, the Law continued to guard the peace and order of our village to everyone's satisfaction. Saturday night, of course, would be the test. If the Law could keep the gang at the Spotted Owl Tavern quiet, then he would be a real law indeed.

The Spotted Owl Tavern is peaceful enough on week-day nights. The few dancers on the floor (concrete, sprinkled with corn meal) behave with propriety and decorum, no one gets very tight, and there are never any fights. Everyone is saving up for Saturday night.

On Saturday nights, however, it is quite a different place. The nickel-in-the-slot graphophone blares out "I'm a Do-Good Daddy" as though for the benefit of the inhabitants of the next county, the dancers stomp with frantic abandon, voices rise to a shout, and inevitably a fight breaks out and degenerates into a free-for-all. No one has ever been killed, but quite a number of our less responsible citizens have received serious injuries from time to time, and it is generally felt that something ought to be done about the Spotted Owl Tavern on Saturday nights.

Now we had the man to do it. One glance at the Law was enough to assure us that Saturday nights would never be the same again at the Spotted Owl.

We were not wrong. On the first Saturday night of the new regime, the Spotted Owl was as quiet as one could wish. The place was full, as usual (where else could we go on Saturday night?), but there was no disorder. The Law looked in regularly every half-hour and found nothing to which he could object.

We were all tremendously gratified. Throughout the next week the Law was even more reassuring, even more imposing, even more majestic, than he had been before.

The next Saturday night at the Spotted Owl began with a burst of good feeling. Tiny had a new boy friend, and her ecstatic and still incredulous hapoiness communicated itself to the whole crowd. Tiny is the general favorite of the village, the life and soul of every Saturday night at the Spotted Owl. We all know that Tiny isn't quite all she should be, but she is always so gay and happy, so ready for a good laugh, even at her own expense, such a good sport, in short, that everyone loves her.

Tiny is a mountain of a girl, strong as an ox. All week she and her mother are bent over their wash-tubs and ironing boards. On Saturday night, radiant in a red silk dress, Tiny presides over the festivities at the Spotted Owl. Everyone buys beers for her; it is a point of honor for all the boys to whirl around the floor at least once with her, helpless in her powerful grasp; and all the girls pause for a cheery word with her, for huge, homely Tiny couldn't take any girl's boy friend away from her. Her rich, throaty yells drown out the phonograph and Ted, the proprietor of the Spotted Owl, declares that the concrete floor is especially for her benefit, since no wooden floor would be able to bear up under the punishment that Tiny would give it.

And now Tiny had a boy friend all her own, a big, burly truck driver, a fit companion in every way for our Tiny. He was free with his money, he was so strong that he could pilot Tiny about the dance floor, rather than be carried around by her, and his capacity for beer was something to marvel at. Tiny's happiness had reached a new peak, and we all rejoiced with her. Even the Law on his periodic inspections stopped to talk to her.

No one knows exactly what did happen that night. There was suddenly a devastating silence. Billy was lying on the floor with blood spouting from his nose, and Tiny's truck driver was withstanding the simultaneous assaults of Gus, Tom and Woojie.

The Law chose this unpropitious moment to enter. From her perch on the table, where she was glorying in her boy friend's triumphant onslaught against overwhelming odds, Tiny saw the Law marching up behind her man, his black jack poised for the one telling blow that would end the fight.

With a yell of rage, Tiny launched her mighty bulk into the air. She landed full on the Law and bore him to the floor, his head striking against the concrete with an ominous thud. Seated astride the prostrate Law, Tiny cried, "Come on, boys; I've got him." Without any clear idea of what they would do with their common foe, everyone rushed to Tiny's aid. Tiny, however, needed no help. The Law was out, cold as a cucumber.

Cold water failed to revive him. While the Spotted Owl emptied instantaneously, Doc Logan was summoned. He brought the Law to and discovered that his patient had a couple of broken ribs. It was Tiny who carried the Law home.

From his bed on Monday morning the Law sent in his resignation.

Fair Enough

A Double Mission

ED KELLY, Mayor of Chicago, just renominated by the Democrats, is visiting Miami on a double mission—to rest from the care of office and to dedicate a plaque to his martyred predecessor, Tony Cermak. Miami is the regular winter resting place of mayors and underworld leaders of Chicago, and Mr. Cermak was away on one of his frequent resting trips when he was martyred. He was almost a chain rester, his vacations sometimes being separated only by nominal interruptions for affairs of state.

Considering that which happened to Mr. Cermak and now, a superstitious man in the place of Mr. Kelly might prefer to remain on the job, which pays the not contemptible wage of $15,000 a year, with no deductions for tardiness or days absent, and all immune to the Federal income tax and free of State tax, of which Illinois has none. But the office of Mayor of Chicago and Jersey City, while they might seem simpler, are much more exhausting than the same office in New York. Mr. LaGuardia stays on the job the year around with the exception of a few hurried political trips looking toward the Presidency and official missions to Washington. Mr. Hague, the millionaire Mayor of Jersey City, who amassed vast wealth by humble frugality on a salary of $8,000 a year, finds it necessary to rest frequently at Palm Beach or in Europe. And Chicago mayors avoid mental and physical breakdown only by dragging themselves away from it all for long periods. Perhaps Mr. LaGuardia is just killing himself. Kelly and Hague are not and Tony Cermak wasn't aiming to.

City Government Moved Southward

THE DUALITY of the Chicago of homes and citizens and the underworld Chicago of gamblers, grafters and racketeers long has imposed a dual office on the mayors. Of course a mayor could announce that he was mayor of the official Chicago only and recognize the existence of no other Chicago. But it hasn't been done, and when the underworld moved its winter capital to Miami back in the days of prohibition and prosperity the city government followed. That is why Mr. Cermak was a familiar figure here. He came down to maintain relations between his government and the men who operated the rackets in Chicago.

But intention of the plaque to Tony Cermak is not quite clear. Obviously, if it is to acknowledge his services to the people of Chicago, then Chicago is the place for it and Miami is presumptuous. The people of Chicago know better than the people of Miami what sort of Mayor Tony Cermak was, and if they have refrained from erecting monuments to him that was no mere negligence, but a positive comment on Tony Cermak by an informed people.

Al Capone Also Entitled to Plaque

IS THE PLAQUE intended to honor Tony's unintentional interception of the bullets which were meant for Franklin D. Roosevelt, the President-elect? If so, why drag down a trainload of Chicago officeholders to witness the rite? Why erect a plaque at all? A man doesn't get a plaque for accidental death, and nobody has been heard to assert that Tony stepped in front of those bullets purposely. He was, in fact, trying to grab Mr. Roosevelt's ear for a few words on behalf of deserving Democrats and other Chicago racketeers and possibly finding Mr. Roosevelt slightly deaf, considering that Tony just barely caught the tailboard of the bandwagon in the convention not so many months before.

Is it not more likely, considering known facts, established custom and the moral tone of Chicago politics, that this mission combines against the official government and representatives of the underworld and comes to arrange co-operation in the election next month?

If plaques are to be raised to martyrs, Al Capone would be a more deserving subject. Mr. Capone is one of the living dead and his condition is chargeable to his immurement and treatment on Alcatraz, the soundproof prison. It wasn't because he was rude that Capone went to Alcatraz. On Alcatraz he couldn't talk to reformers, reporters or rival politicians.

Capone suffered more than Tony, and his long passion and consequent lunacy obliterated the crimes of many Chicagoans, including, no doubt, some in the present delegation.

Watson to Retire as Brigadier, Become Presidential Secretary

Col. Edwin M. Watson (left), White House military aide through the Roosevelt Administration, was named to the White House secretariat yesterday by President Roosevelt. He is receiving congratulations from Stephen Early, another of the President's secretaries

Roosevelt Military Aide, Now a Colonel, To Take Son James' Place on Staff; Famous as Fisherman, Raconteur

Col. Edwin M. Watson, gifted raconteur and one of West Point's "Pa's," will succeed James Roosevelt next month as a secretary to President Roosevelt, the White House announced yesterday.

Meanwhile, the artilleryman, who was a tackle on the West Point eleven, will be appointed brigadier general, and will retire at that rank March 31.

Col. Watson has been the President's military aide since the beginning of his first administration. He accompanied the President on his recent cruise.

He is expected to relieve Marvin H. McIntyre, White House secretary, of some of his duties, and also to handle the work that devolved on James Roosevelt, who resigned his secretarial position last November.

Col. Watson acquired the designation of "Pa" by being the oldest man in his class at West Point. He was appointed in 1904 by Secretary of the Navy Swanson, then a Virginia Representative.

Born at Eufala, Ala., December 10, 1883, he was 24 when he was graduated in 1908.

One of the most popular officers in the Army, he is an ardent sportsman, specializing in hunting and fishing, particularly deep-sea fishing, associates say. The lure of the hunt frequently finds him at duck blinds, or with shooting parties in the fields in search of grouse or quail. He is an expert shot.

Col. Watson has a distinguished war record. He commanded the First Battalion, Twelfth Field Artillery, Second Division, in the Toulon-Tyoyon defensive sector south of Verdun, in March and April of 1918; in the Aisne defensive northwest of Chateau Thierry, in June and July; in the Aisne-Marne offensive south of Soissons, in July, and in the St. Mihiel offensive in September.

His battalion was the first United States Army unit to be placed in firing position at Belleau Wood. For gallantry on this occasion, he received awards from both the United States and French governments.

Besides receiving White House callers he will handle various liaison duties, involving possibly occasional "contacts" with Congress, in his new job.

As White House secretary, his salary will be $10,000 a year. This compares with a salary of $7,200 as colonel. His retirement pay as brigidaire general will be $4,500—the same as if he had remained a colonel. He will not draw retirement pay, however, until he has left the Government service.

Col. Watson is the husband of Frances Nash, concert pianist. He has been a constant traveling companion of the President, and is regarded as one of his closest friends.

Capt. Gaston Says 'No Thanks' Girl Is No Wallflower

"The no-thank-you-girl at cocktail time is no longer a social wallflower" in the opinion of Capt. Edward Page Gaston, founder of the World Federation Party.

Gaston asserted that a remarkable change has occurred in Washington drinking customs and declared, in a broadcast over Station WOL last night, that:

"Milk, straight, and non-kick juices" are now substituted for highballs in exclusive District circles.

Roscoe Turner Urges Light Plane Training for Youth

Col. Roscoe Turner, speed flier, visited Washington yesterday to plead for "proper" training under the Administration's new program to teach 20,000 college students to fly as an auxiliary air force.

Turner said he would like to have a part in the training organization and urged that the novices be taught to fly light bodied, low powered craft. These, Turner declared, would give the student a proper foundation for flying high powered machines.

Governor's Fire Is Not So Hot

Boston, March 6 (AP).—Attempting to create a more homey atmosphere, Gov. Saltonstall today touched a match to kindling in the Massachusetts State House executive chamber fireplace, unused for 100 years—and the smoke drove him out.

The ventilation "wasn't so good," the Governor said, and gave up the idea.

Trade Leaders Approve Sites

Directors of the Washington Board of Trade yesterday approved sites for the proposed auditorium and combined armory and sports center selected by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Erection of the auditorium is scheduled at Constitution avenue and John Marshall place; the Armory sports center at the foot of East Capitol street.

Schwert Pledges Vote to Firemen

Washington firemen last night heard Representative Schwert, of New York, enlarge on his experiences as a volunteer fireman and vow support of the District firefighters five-day week bill.

Another speaker at Pythian Temple was George J. Richardson, secretary-treasurer of the International Firemen's Association. Capt. J. L. Weirheim presided at the meeting.

House Milk Probe Asked by Smith

Milk

to the Commissioners today.

The revised code is the outgrowth of an investigation which resulted in seizure of 2,480 gallons of cream consigned to a local dairy and arrest of eight men Saturday. Charged with violation of the 1925 milk act are James J. Ward, president of the Embassy-Fairfax Dairy, and "Pinkey" Alexander, colored, 38, an employe.

Ward said last night products sold by Embassy and Fairfax-Farms dairies "are absolutely pure and wholesome and comply with the health regulations of the Health Department."

Scat said the revised code would require all local dairy operators to furnish detailed information about milk shipments coming into the District.

He ordered Embassy-Fairfax Dairy officials to remove from the District within 24 hours the 200 cans of cream, seizure of which touched off the disclosures.

Police Court hearings for Ward and Alexander were set for March 14. Alexander will appear at a District Court hearing today on the habeas corpus writ under which he was released.

Ward Issues Statement

The statement issued by Ward said:

"As president of the Embassy Dairy and the Fairfax Farms Dairy, both of Washington, I want to state in most emphatic terms that all of the milk, cream and dairy products sold by these dairies to the public of Washington are absolutely pure and wholesome and fully comply with the health regulations of the Health Department. I should like to impress the fact that both these dairy plants are regularly inspected by the Health Department, and are at all times open for such inspection.

"The public is welcome to visit either or both of these plants and see for themselves the great care and caution we use in handling dairy products, and also to see the thorough sanitary conditions under which the milk and cream are processed. Regular tests are made by the laboratory of the District of Columbia Health Department of milk and cream which we sell to the Washington public. These laboratory tests show conclusively that our products are wholesome and nutritious and of a high grade.

Buy in Va. and Md.

"Both the Fairfax-Farms Dairy and the Embassy Dairy buy milk direct from farmers in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia, all of whose farms are under constant inspection and supervision of District of Columbia health inspectors. The barns in which the cows are housed and milked are kept scrupulously clean at all times, and the cows are given the best of care . . .

"I simply want the public to know that at no time since I have been in the dairy business in Washington has there been any charge made against me or against the dairies of which I am president. We have thousands of customers in this city, and their continued use of our products is evidence of their cleanliness, wholesomeness, and nutritious value. We are very grateful for their patronage, and, particularly, do we appreciate the loyal support these customers have given us since publication of stories in the newspapers concerning our products . . ."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Necessity For American Recovery

NO DOUBT it is true that over and above the deterrents to economic recovery in the United States, there are the greater deterrents of the international race of armaments, the unending series of diplomatic crises, and the world-wide fear of war. In every important decision that the Government has to make, in every important commitment that businessmen and bankers might consider, there is the proviso: Will the decision be right, will the investment be safe, if the world goes to war?

Yet it is equally true, and practically it is much more significant, that a genuine full recovery in the United States is the greatest contribution that can now be made to the prevention of war. Recovery in America is in fact indispensable to the defense of law and order in the other world, to the consolidation of that determination, which is now manifest in every country, to defend the peace against aggression and revolution. There has been a radical improvement in the international situation during the past two months. But this improvement can be maintained and advanced only if in the United States the unemployed men, the partially employed machines, and the reserves of idle capital are brought into production.

Others Affected By Slump In U. S.

THE AMERICAN economy represents approximately half of the commercial capacity of the world. For that reason depression and prosperity in the United States have an enormous, and probably a decisive influence upon the economic life of all the other nations that depend, much more than we depend, upon normal international trade. There is little doubt, for example, that the severe American slump of 1937 was one of the causes of the lamentable weakness of Great Britain and France during the summer of 1938. Not only did the general economic decline aggravate the economic and social difficulties within France and Great Britain; the fall in primary commodities prices enabled Germany, which is organized not for normal trade but for barter, to obtain at knockdown prices the raw materials for the armament program.

In fact, depression in the outer world, since it creates unsalable surpluses of raw materials, is a subsidy to a regime like that of the Nazis which operates on forced labor at home and barter abroad. But it is a disaster to the free nations which must sustain their armament programs, and care for their unemployed, out of the income from the free exchange of goods.

Dangers Of War Are Less Today

WE MAY GO further and say that the reason why the dangers of war are so much less today than they were in the autumn is that the pacific nations appear to be winning the race of armaments. No doubt the race of armaments is a hideous waste of the wealth of mankind: the only thing that can be said for it is that it is cheaper and less horrible than a war or than surrender to aggression. And since there is no known way of discouraging aggression except to demonstrate that the aggression cannot be successful, the armament programs are the least of the possible evils.

But these programs cannot be carried out by free nations unless they are able to put all their resources to work. They simply cannot afford to arm at such gigantic cost and at the same time support millions of unemployed, run their industries on part time, bury their gold in the ground and freeze up their capital in the banks. And since the American economy is the greatest factor in the economy of the world, it will be decided by what happens here whether the whole world-wide effort is to be sustained long enough to be successful or whether it is to be stopped and ruined by bankruptcy and economic collapse.

Not A Question Of Politics At Home

IF THE PRESIDENT would look at this situation in its largest and most statesmanlike aspect he must see, it seems to me, how much is at stake in the present agitation for recovery. It is not only a question of politics at home, nor of the condition of the American budget, nor of this or that measure of the New Deal. These things are important, but much more important is to give to the immensely hopeful movement for an honorable world peace quick and substantial economic assistance.

The moment is right for a decisive show of policy by the President which will bring promptly into action the energy of a great recovery in America. What is needed and what is possible is not a series of little measures accompanied by verbal assurances, but an action, as decisive as his embargo on gold in the spring of 1933, which will cause the resumption of private investment. The only thing which will surely bring that about quickly is to offer investors and speculators the inducement of profits large enough to overcome their inertia and their fears.

Capital Gains Tax Repeal Is Urged

THE STROKE of policy most certain to do that would be the repeal of the capital gains tax. No doubt there are theoretical objections to this. But every bold and decisive stroke has some disadvantages. The question is whether, given the total situation here and in the world, a quick resumption of speculation and investment for profit would not produce immediate and general benefits that outweighed all the theoretical disadvantages.

I think it would. It seems to me that we should say to ourselves that the resumption of private investment is absolutely necessary, that none of our other problems can be dealt with unless we can bring about the resumption of private investment. If that is true then we ought to use whatever means are necessary to achieve the end. We should make up our minds that what is at stake is much too important to be jeopardized by half measures. We have not hesitated to subsidize the farmers not to produce; we ought not to hesitate to subsidize by means of drastic tax reform the inducement to the capitalists to invest.

For the prosperity which this willingness to invest boldly can bring to us and to the world is indispensable everywhere at this time to the maintenance of peace and to the restoration of order.

King and Queen Start Trip May 6

By the Associated Press.

London, March 6.—King George and Queen Elizabeth will leave for Canada and the United States aboard the battle cruiser Repulse, May 6 instead of May 8, as originally planned, it was announced today.

Due in Quebec May 15, they arranged the earlier departure to avoid possibility of late arrival.

Duce Orders New Plane Factory

Rome, March 6 (AP).—Premier Mussolini today ordered a new aviation center with a plane factory, testing laboratory and flying field built 15 miles east of Naples.

Mussolini had a fresh report on Italy's Libyan defenses facing French-controlled Tunisia from Marshal Pietro Badoglio, just returned from a visit there.

College Fliers Meet March 20

Private flying will be the chief topic at the fifth National Intercollegiate Flying Conference, to be held at Wardman Park Hotel beginning March 20, it was announced yesterday.

Among those participating will be Edward J. Noble and Robert Hinckley, of the Civil Aeronautics Authority; Grove Webster, of the CAA private flying development section; Rudolph Loening, Roger W. Kahn, A. R. Stevenson, Richard DuPont, James Guthrie, Robert Love, Walter Williams and Charles L. Morris.

FCC Radio-Control Inquiry Sought

A Senate resolution introduced yesterday by Senator White (Republican), of Maine, called for Senatorial investigation of the Federal Communications Commission, with particular regard to radio censorship of broadcasters and "influence" over radio stations.

New Deal Justice

Congress' Problem

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT and Secretary of Labor Perkins are attempting to bring together the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations. Because this negotiation is under way, there has been postponement, in Congress, of steps to amend the law having to do with organized labor, the National Labor Relations act. The postponement, presumably, is only for the duration of the negotiations between A. F. of L. and C. I. O. Many persons feel it is desirable that this session of Congress should not end without action to make clear the attitude of Congress toward the sit-down strike. The need for action by Congress can be suggested by reviewing what has been done about the sit-down strike by the Federal courts.

A case involving a sit-down strike (in the plant of the Fansteel Metallurgical Corporation at Chicago) has just finished passage through the courts. In this sit-down, the sit-downers practiced violence, in holding possession of the plant against the owners, and in resisting law officers. As a result, some of the sit-downers were arrested, tried and convicted.

Without going into the details of the case, the essential issue was that after the sit-down was over, the employer, the Fansteel Corporation, refused to reinstate some of the sit-downers in the jobs they had formerly held. The sit-downers, through their union, appealed to the National Labor Relations Board at Washington. The Labor Board issued an order requiring the Fansteel Corporation to reinstate the sit-downers.

THIS ORDER by the Labor Board was appealed to a lower Federal court in Illinois. This court held that the Labor Board was wrong, that the Fansteel Corporation need not reinstate the sit-downers. Thereupon the Labor Board carried the case up to the Supreme Court of the United States. The Supreme Court a week ago, by a 5 to 2 decision, held against the Labor Board, held that the Fansteel Corporation need not reinstate the sit-downers.

Study of the passage of this case through the courts reveals what seems a significant fact. On the lower Federal court in Illinois, which first decided the case, there were three judges. Two of the judges—who decided against the Labor Board and against the sit-downers and made a majority opinion—were judges who had been on the court for several years. The third judge had been appointed to the court by President Roosevelt in 1937. This Roosevelt appointee handed down a minority opinion, upholding the Labor Board and the sit-downers.

Here was a clear division between judges appointed some years ago, and a judge appointed by President Roosevelt during the New Deal.

In the Supreme Court there was the same division. Five justices, all of whom had been appointed some years ago, held against the sit-downers and handed down the majority opinion to that effect. Two justices, who were appointed by President Roosevelt, Mr. Justice Black and Mr. Justice Reed, handed down a minority opinion upholding the Labor Board and the sit-downers.

Here, in the two courts combined, was a clear cleavage. In the two courts combined, seven judges decided against the sit-down—all were judges appointed before the New Deal. Three judges uheld the Labor Board—all were appointed by President Roosevelt.

FROM THIS AN inference is made, which is of course an inference only. There is on the Supreme Court a third justice appointed by Mr. Roosevelt. He is Mr. Justice Frankfurter. Mr. Frankfurter did not participate in the decision on the sit-down strike case, because he had been appointed subsequent to the hearings held by the court on the case. There is a certain amount of surmise—which is of course surmise only and may be quite wrong—that had this third Roosevelt appointee taken part in the decision, he migh have joined with the other Roosevelt appointees.

Further, there is at the present time a vacancy on the Supreme Court. It is surmised—and this again is of course mere surmise—that anyone whom Mr. Roosevelt is likely to appoint to this vacancy would take the same attitude with respect to sit-down strikes as has been taken by all the New Deal judges, in both courts.

A further surmise is made upon the basis of future possibilities. It is possible that during the remainder of President Roosevelt's term, yet another vacancy or vacancies may occur on the Supreme Court. And it is surmised that if this should happen, there might be on the Supreme Court five justices, a majority, who would take a position favorable to the Labor Board and to the sit-down in any future case analogous to the one that has already passed through the courts.

As a result of this surmise about future possibilities, many feel that permanent outlawing of the sit-down strike ought not to depend on future judicial decisions. They feel that the sit-down should be so clearly outlawed by formal act of Congress that no court could in future uphold it. It is possible that judges or justices who now feel obliged by their consciences to interpret the existing law as permitting the sit-down strike, would welcome having the law so changed as to leave no doubt about the intention to outlaw the sit-down.

Persons who feel this way think that the pending attempt to unite A. F. of L. and C. I. O. ought not to be permitted to interfere with or delay action of Congress on the sit-down strike, and on the Labor Board and the National Labor Relations act generally.

Achilles' Heel

Dr. Goebbels Strikes A Plaintive Note

IN THE COURSE of the fiscal year beginning next month, Great Britain plans to spend no less than $2,725,000,000 for her army, navy and air force.

It is a staggering sum. It is actually more than four-fifths of the amount spent by the British government for all purposes as recently as 1933. But the indications are that instead of constituting the absolute limit beyond which Great Britain will not and cannot go, the present arms budget may only prove a starting point for an even more ambitious effort in the future.

GREAT BRITAIN'S debt burden is already enormous and the new rearmament program will increase it. But the British are in a position to carry on at the present pace for some time longer; other powers, notably the totalitarian nations, are not.

This fact is of the utmost significance. It constitutes both an element of hope while harboring a possibility of danger. Seeing the superiority in war power which they have hitherto enjoyed slipping out of their hands, the axis powers may decide to strike now, before the balance is shifted too decidedly against them.

But it may be that the time for this has passed, that a "dynamic" policy such as is favored by Ribbentrop, Goebbels and Himmler in Germany and by Ciano in Italy now involves uncomfortable and dangerous risks.

Even in that case, however, the dictators may ultimately take the chance in the hope that the new preponderance of power enjoyed by Great Britain and France, with the material assistance which the United States is prepared to render them, will be offset by an unwillingness to accept the Nazi-Fascist challenge. That has happened in the past; the possibility cannot be ruled out that it may happen again.

Margin Of Safety In Axis States Dwindling

WHAT MAKES such a possibility real is that the domestic margin of safety for both Hitler and Mussolini has been reduced. If, at present, they are still quite safe from overthrow they have no assurance that this will be the case a year or two years or three years from now. That would be particularly true if, in the meantime, the democracies proceed at their present rate of rearmament, reform their lines and become less and less willing to submit to totalitarian pressure.

In other words, the dictators have to reckon with the likelihood that, given time, Great Britain and France will submit to no further Munichs but will stand their ground. When that moment comes, Hitler and Mussolini may no longer be able to ease pressures at home by creating diversions abroad. It would then be necessary for them either to submit to those pressures and modify the bases of their regime or face overthrow.

ALREADY internal pressure both within Germany and Italy are greater than is generally realized and they will hardly be diminished by the challenge contained in the British, the French and the American rearmament program.

Rearmament has since the beginning of the Hitler regime been the basis of Nazi economy as well as one of the leading factors in the Third Reich's external successes.

To develop the German army and air force and bring the German fleet up to its present considerable level, a good deal has been sacrificed in the way of national and individual well-being, but the hope has been that, in due course, it would be possible to ease the pressure bearing down on the German people either through the establishment of a wholly self-contained economy or through the territorial and ideological expansion of the Third Reich.

That hope has remained unfulfilled. The annexation of Austria and the Sudetenland have added many square miles to Germany's territory. But they have made her more dependent on the outside world than ever before.

Trade Decline Threatens Regime

THUS IT is that the very moment when the Third Reich finds it necessary to meet the challenge embodied in the British rearmament program she finds herself least able to do so. The favorable balance of trade which she enjoyed in 1937, when exports exceeded imports by around 450,000,000 marks, was followed, last year, by an unfavorable balance of an equal sum.

In one year, therefore, Germany has been deprived of around a billion marks which could have been used for the purchase of essential raw materials and needed foodstuffs. She is to that extent, therefore, in a less favorable position to match Britain's rearmament efforts than she was a year ago. And unless her foreign trade position improves her situation will become even worse.

The fact is that Germany's spectacular efforts of the past six years have used up her substance. Her factories are running at full blast. But money and material for replacement are lacking. Labor is fully employed, in contrast to the 7,000,000 who were out of work in 1932. But the hours of labor have been stepped up so sharply that efficiency has steadily gone down. Taxes have mounted to an incredible level, profits are declining, inflation threatens.

NO WONDER there is grumbling in the Third Reich. No wonder Dr. Goebbels in opening the Leipzig fair has seen fit to attack the grumblers, to argue that Germany's present plight is not of the regime's making but of the governments that preceded Hitler's.

No wonder, too, that he saw fit to plead with the outside world to co-operate with the Third Reich in carrying out her economic program, in other words, buying German goods so that German industries can secure the necessary raw materials. German labor work, the German military machine those essentials which must be purchased abroad. By admission, therefore, the spectacular but top-heavy economic machine created by the Nazis can only continue to operate with foreign aid.

This admission is of vast importance. It shows that the Nazi leaders realize it is not Germany, but the democratic powers, which now have the upper hand. And what makes it worse, from the viewpoint of the Third Reich, is that the democracies are beginning to realize it, too, and even to act on it.

Lima Mayor Says Peru Will Finish Highway in 1941

Completion of the Pan-American highway will greatly increase commerce and tourist travel between the American republics, Eduardo Dibos Dammert, mayor of Lima, Peru, declared yesterday.

"Peru will be the first nation after the United States to complete its segment of the highway," he stated yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel, where he is stopping with his two daughters, Ida and Yvonne.

"Our part of the road," he added, "will have an asphalt surface. It stretches 2,000 miles and will be ready for use in June, 1941."

Doctor Finds Boils Near Spine May Cause Paralysis

Atlanta, Ga., March 6 (AP).—Common boils and carbuncles were declared today to be a relatively common cause of paralysis and even death.

When such infections, usually treated lightly, are located on the back or back of the neck near the spine, they may spread to the spinal cord, Dr. George H. Bunch, of Columbia, S. C., told the Southeastern Surgical Congress.

Such complications, which may resemble infantile paralysis, are "not uncommon," he declared, and "if left untreated, are probably always fatal."

Robert Accused Of Lobbying for Freight-Rate Cut

By the Associated Press.

Representative Martin J. Kennedy (Democrat), of New York, pledged support to Gov. Lehman of New York yesterday in a fight against proposed legislation to lower Southern freight rates.

"At the same time Kennedy called the Governor's attention, in a letter, to what he described as "lobbying on behalf of these bills" by L. W. (Chip) Robert, jr., secretary of the National Democratic Committee and executive director of the Southeastern Governors' Conference. He wrote:

"I deplore the fact that as a high party official he has taken such an active part in a question so manifestly unfair to the State of New York."

Frank Stearns, Adviser to Coolidge, Dies

Merchant Prince, A National Figure, Never Held Office

Frank W. Stearns, "discoverer" and political adviser of the late President Coolidge, succumbed to pneumonia at 82 yesterday in his Boston (Mass.) home.

The merchant prince who helped guide Coolidge from the Bay State Legislature to the White House in ten years was the second intimate friend of the former President to pass away within two days. John Garibaldi Sargent, Attorney General in Coolidge's Cabinet, died Sunday.

Adviser to Coolidge

A national figure during the Coolidge Administration, Mr. Stearns held no office himself, but was often referred to as the "White House Floor Walker," in which capacity he served as buffer for the President and as his most trusted adviser.

Mr. Stearns, whose son, Foster, is a Republican Representative from New Hampshire, first met the President-to-be rather accidentally in 1914. At that time Coolidge was president of the Massachusetts Senate and Mr. Stearns head of the R. H. Stearns Co., a department store.

Drafted Coolidge

The dry goods merchant early became convinced Coolidge was one of the State's great men, and personally undertook a campaign to draft Coolidge as candidate for lieutenant governor. Mr. Stearns helped Coolidge in his rise to the Governorship, and when the latter's handling of the Boston police strike "revealed" him to the country—as Mr. Stearns put it—the business-man-philantrophist went to the national Republican convention of 1920 with the aim of placing Coolidge at the top of the ticket.

Ambition Realized

Mr. Stearns' ambition was realized when Calvin Coolidge entered the White House. He and Mrs. Stearns, who celebrated their fifth-ninth wedding anniversary eight days ago, were perhaps the most frequent visitors at the Executive Mansion, but he is said to have asked no honors or favors. Asked what his position was in the White House circle, Mr. Stearns once answered: "Oh, I just run a few errands."

Claude M. Feuss, official biographer of Coolidge, once said, "It is evident that it was the faith of Mr. Stearns in Gov. Coolidge which gave him the opportunity to become the President of the United States. Not since the days of Franklin Pierce had a New Englander lived in the White House and it was the stubborn loyalty of Frank W. Stearns which gave to Massachusetts its first President since John Quincy Adams."

Coolidge's decision "I do not choose to run" in 1928 came as a shock to Mr. Stearns, but the President's consideration for his close friend was such that he wired him the news before releasing it to the press.

Born in Boston, November 8, 1856, the son of Richard H. and Louisa Maria Waterman Stearns, Mr. Stearns was educated at Noble School, Boston, and Amherst College. He later entered his father's business, and rose to be chairman of the board. In 1880 he married Emily Willston Clark of Amherst.

Besides his wife and son, Mr. Stearns leaves two daughters, Mrs. Emily W. Giese, of Wellesley, Mass., and Mrs. Louisa Prescott, of Grafton, Mass.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Gertrude Clarke Whittall Foundation in the Library of Congress presents Adolf Busch and Rudolf Serkin Monday night in the second of three recitals of music for violin and piano. Program: Sonata in C minor, Op. 30, No. 2 (Beethoven), Sonata in A major, Op. 100 (Brahms), Rondo, Op. 70 (Schubert).

That dynamic pair of musicians, Adolf Busch and Rudolf Serkin, again excited their auditors to high enthusiasm last evening at the second recital in their current series at the Library of Congress. The zest of their playing was contagious, and it would have been a stolid person indeed who could have resisted it. When artists concentrate their energies, as these two do, upon a vital interpretation of music, they create, like an electrical discharge, a vacuum into which rushes the emotional response of the listeners.

One fancies that these admirable collaborators could, if they chose to do so, make the most trite and banal piece of music sound significant, for the vitality of their playing is irresistible. One forgets their technical skill in the glowing radiance of its projection. All their faculties are focused on the one point of interpretation which becomes incandescent.

Far from trivial was the music to which they devoted themselves last evening, for their program opened with Beethoven's C minor sonata and proceeded with the A major sonata of Brahms. It would be hard to say which of these compositions they read with the greater insight, for the meaning of both was disclosed with moving eloquence.

From these master works the twain turned their attention to Schubert's seldom-heard Rondo, Op. 70, a piece brilliantly written for both violin and piano. While it is not one of Schubert's inspired utterances, it contains a considerable measure of his romantic fervor and is characterized by his peculiar imaginative phrasing.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, tense nerves and moody spells.

Just get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a reliable "WOMAN'S" tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and those disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life.

Pinkham's is WELL WORTH trying.

Housing Called Strengthener Of Democracy

Cushioned British Depression, USHA Aide Tells Bar Unit

Housing as a "national undertaking has enormous possibilities for strengthening democracy and our form of government, which in the last analysis depends upon the social contentment of the people," Leon B. Keyserling, deputy administrator and general counsel of the United States Housing Authority, declared last night.

Slum clearance and the construction of proper homes "is nonpartisan, concrete and businesslike," he told 250 persons meeting at the Mayflower Hotel under the auspices of the Committee on Comparative Laws of Housing of the Section of International and Comparative Laws of the American Bar Association.

Keyserling emphasized that no democracy has ever abandoned a national housing program after once undertaking the project.

Hitler ("Junked" Germany's

"The German liberal republic," he added, "started a marvelous housing program which has been practically junked by Mr. Hitler."

Public housing projects, Keyserling continued, "not only have been of tremendous value themselves, but have stimulated private enterprise along the same lines."

Eased British Depression

He declared "it is the consensus of economists" that the British housing program aided in cushioning the depression in the United Kingdom and had eased fluctuation in the business cycle.

Dr. H. Milton Colvin, general chairman of the committee on comparative laws of housing of the American Bar Association, presided.

Keyserling was introduced by Morris Miller, chairman of the division on publicly financed housing of the committee on comparative laws of housing and William R. Vallence, chairman of the section of international and comparative laws, also attended.

Martin Faction in UAW Bars 'Ism' Adherents From Office

Officials from four States and the District yesterday created the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin to clear the basin streams of pollution and conserve their fish life.

In an all-day session at the United States Chamber of Commerce Building the 35 representatives agreed to a compact which specifies that the commission be composed of 18 members—three each from Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and the District, and three appointed by the President.

A budget of $12,000 was set for the first year of operation, the amount to be contributed by participating members of the commission on the basis of population and area affected. Under this agreement, the District of Columbia's appropriation would be $3,600; Virginia's, $1,800; Maryland's, $3,000; West Virginia's, $2,400 and Pennsylvania's $1,200.

The basin area was designated as the Potomac Valley Conservancy District, to replace the Potomac Valley Pollution Commission. As duties of the commission increased, the budget could be boosted to $30,000 annually—but not above that.

The conservancy district which would be under supervision of the commission comprises 14,176 square miles and has a population of almost 1,500,000 population.

Dr. R. H. Riley declared the district "in years to come will serve as a testing area in which we can determine what is to be done with industrial waste products." He predicted that pollution clearance would take from 10 to 15 years, but said research into waste uses would be instituted from the beginning.

Frank Bane, executive director of the Council of State Governments, presided at the organization conference. C. F. Browning of the District health department, served as secretary. Oliver Gasch represented the cororation council's office.

Bank of America Asks Court to Bar SEC Investigation

The Bank of America National Trust & Savings Association yesterday filed a brief in the Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia arguing that the proposed Securities and Exchange Commission investigation into its affairs in connection with the Transamerica Corporation proceedings "is an exercise of visitorial powers."

The brief was filed by the bank's legal staff, headed by Donald Richberg. It argues that there is no reason why "the plenary powers of the Comptroller of the Currency should be duplicated," by granting the SEC powers of examination of the bank's affairs.

The District Court here upheld the commission's contention last night that it was within its rights to seek information.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Trio of Bachelors Cannot Find the Girls They Would Care to Marry; What's the Trouble?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We are three young men, aged 26, living together in Washington and working for the Government. Each of us is a college graduate, has a professional degree, and a professional classification in Government service. With pardonable pride, we may state that we have good family backgrounds (two of us are from the South; one from the North), good health, and personalities which have proved to be not unattractive to the opposite sex.

But now comes the rub: Despite the fact that we have been in the city for almost two years, we have thus far been unable to meet any young ladies toward whom we would have serious intentions—meaning matrimony. By way of explanation, we may add that our social contacts have been fairly broad: We have met and "dated" girls in practically every level of the social scale; we have attended church parties, state society dances, departmental affairs and private entertainments. Still, our quest is proceeding apace without any encouraging results.

It may or may not surprise you to learn that we think about and discuss marriage frequently. We have reached the point where we feel that we are in a position to marry, and keenly regret that we see no prospect in the near future for the much needed and much desired advantages which we believe a marriage and home life will bring.

The stock advice we are given on this question by our friends is, "Just wait until the right girl comes along." We are comparatively young, and have by no means despaired as yet. But, when is that mythical girl going to put in her appearance? What can we do to help assure that she will? Again, we are told that we are too particular; that we are looking for an ideal girl who does not exist. Naturally, we have certain standards which a girl must meet—but we do not insist that she be a beautiful blonde, 5 feet 2, eyes of blue, etc. We just want a girl to love who has character, a sense of humor and who knows the value of money.

We are beginning to wonder whether the supply of such girls is plentiful here. If it is, the social law of supply and demand evidently works very poorly in our case. Perhaps you, or some of your readers, can help us solve this dilemma. (Do not publish our names)

THREE BACHELORS.

Atmospheric Interference

DEAR BACHELORS: It is entirely possible that you are so satiated with superficial social contacts, and so befuddled by rambling discussions of marriage and hypothetically suitable wives, that you wouldn't recognize the answer to your prayer if you met her. You may, indeed, already have met her many times in many guises, yet failed to single her out through sheer lack of discernment. It is possible, too, that the intangibly anti-feminine atmosphere so peculiar to an all-bachelor menage subtly conspires to throw dust in your eyes, where a given girl is concerned.

I recall a conversation I had a few years ago with a young bachelor who was quartered in just such a set-up. He was interested (so I gathered) in getting a woman's objective reaction (if such a thing is possible) to the always fascinating subject of men, women and emotions. And I was equally interested in getting his particular reactions to the female of the species. The conversation loitered along many avenues of thought. It was evident, from the man's alert intelligence, his cultural background and the catholic range of his interests and acquaintances, that his conclusions were deserving of respect.

Among other things, he remarked, rather ruefully, that a bachelor who bunks with other bachelors has an insidious atmospheric resistance to overcome, in the matter of falling unreservedly in love and settling with finality upon a wife. As he explained it, the individual man, thus situated, finds himself appraising the individual girl through as many pairs of eyes—weighing her desirability against as many sets of prejudices and preferences—as there are men under the roof; and this almost in spite of himself, and sometimes in defiance of his most fundamental instinct.

It is not, he explained, that one's colleagues in masculine domesticity display any overt, intrusive interest in one's romantic pursuits; or that they presume to comment, unless most amiably and casually, upon one's choice of feminine companions. But rather, that one intuitively divines their several secret or subconscious reactions—usually at somewhat puzzling or contradictory variance—and gradually loses the trend of his original thought and feeling in process of dealing (again more or less subconsciously) with what we might call atmospheric interference.

Such subtle hindrances to love and marriage may be at work in your case. Maybe if you talked less with each other about the things nearest your respective hearts; maybe if you sought and sustained a consistent margin of inviolable personal privacy (mental, spiritual and social), in which to assess your individual needs and the ways in which they can best be met; in which to examine the goods the gods provide and to determine, each by and for himself, the extent to which such goods measure up or fall short—you might arrive with astonishing rapidity at an eminently suitable and satisfying choice.

As I heard someone say the other day: "Never talk too much about things you intend to do. It only muddies the water." And I can imagine this might be particularly true in regard to speculative approaches to love and marriage. There is no dearth of attractive, intelligent, socially competent girls in this city. There are enough and to spare, for every eligible bachelor who is wife-hunting with that type of girl in view.

If you have been all over the lot, and yet have never seen a girl who seemed to possess "character, a sense of humor and a knowledge of the value of money," it must be that the fault is within yourselves or in your approach—since it is not in society. The sort of girls you say you want are all about you. Hence one must conclude either that you don't want what you say you want; or, that you wouldn't recognize it if you saw it; or, that you lack the self-sufficing single-mindedness of purpose to go after it, if and when it crosses your path. A Spring Sister Act in Plaids

The Scots know a good bolt of wool plaid better than all the fabric sleuths in the world. They put every member of the family in brave tribal plaids, from littlest sister on up. Here are two authentic clan versions

The teen-aged girl, above, wears a Gorden plaid in bright green and black. Her little sister takes her Scotch straight—in the form of a double breasted reefer in tart spring colors. These are two of the many gay modes featured in Washington this week for National Children's Week

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Former Wife of Simpson Runs Service Bureau; Daughters, 23 and 15, Live With Her

New York, March 6.

NOT LONG ago we hounds of the press struck the trail of one of the figures in the Davy-Wally romance which rocked the world and threw the British empire for a 20-yard loss. Here in our midst lives and labors a pretty woman with prematurely white hair whose name is Dorothea Parsons Simpson, and she is the former wife of the Ernest Simpson who resigned his Wallis in favor of the King-Emperor.

ALICE HUGHES.

Mrs. Simpson that was runs a personal service bureau for rich people here in town—the sort of folk who don't want to be bothered with domestic details. She is really an extra special social secretary. The Simpson stunt is not a common employment agency, for the servants she selects pay no agency fees. The employer pays that to Dorothea, and since she is in society herself, she has plenty of excellent contacts and her business is good.

Though she hasn't the money of the old days, Mrs. Simpson keeps punching and has made a comfortable and interesting life for herself and her two daughters, Cynthia, 23, and Audrey, 15. The latter is the daughter of Simpson. They live in a small and crowded but quite charming apartment. Cynthia, being the elder and an important member of the family firm, sleeps in the lower bunk of the two which have been built to save space, while Audrey, still a mere schoolgirl, draws the upper.

Dorothea Simpson has taken the changes in her fortune in stride, and is a game woman. As for marriage, she says "I never have thought of marrying again." All in all, this gracious figure who held an unenviable spotlight for a little while has done a mighty fine job of being a former wife.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: I just had a look at some of the clothes the exotic Valentina has designed for Katharine Hepburn in her new play, "A Philadelphia Story." The costume that struck me most is a "swan gown" of white chiffon whose drapery reaches to the chin and which has a slim skirt that still has 28 yards of fabric at the hem. With this goes a short, full coat of starched chiffon. Boy, I'll bet Katie is a sight in that! . . .

The liveliest book I read in the past week is "Through Embassy Eyes," written by the sprightly Martha Dodd who is the daughter of the professor who was American Ambassador to Berlin during four years of the present regime. Martha Dodd, who is the daughter as well as unpleasant things to relate and she tells the story very brightly. I call it a darned nice piece of work.

Jealousy is no respecter of persons. Across the river in Jersey, Mary Atchison, 73, has just had her husband, William, 78, tossed into chokey on a charge of non-support. The bride of four years told the judge that Bill was unbearably jealous, which led to cruelty. Good heavens, is there no escape from this common curse, even in extreme old age?

Lilly Dache, my milliner pal, tells me that the unresting Schiaparelli has revived the use of the beauty mark, and that smart Parisian women are now slinking around with gold hearts and dots plastered on their foreheads, cheek bones and even legs. Good old Elsa. When she can't think up a new one she dives into the trunk and comes up with an old timer like the beauty spot!

Start a Spring Flower Garden

SUCH A cheerful gate! How it invites your friends to look in and share your garden with you.

So easy to create spots like that in your garden, around your house, when you know what shrubs, vines and flowers to choose.

What to plant at your gate? A vine, of course, to trail happily over an arched trellis — and what is prettier than a purple flowering clematis, sparkling with dew in the early morning?

On either side of your neighborly gate, plant a flowering almond with a wealth of little pink and white blossoms. A smaller shrub next—the beautiful dwarf azalea. Its colors? Flowers are pink, red, lilac, white, yellow, orange or scarlet. Delightfully fragrant too.

The same lovely group would be charming around your doorway. Or would you like a climbing rose, a heavenly blue morning glory trained over your trellis?

Low spreading shrubs like sweetbriar, fragrant sumac and sweet pepper-bush planted around your house gives it height.

Evergreens thrive along north walls, give you year-around greenery. To hide unsightly sheds, garages, trail Hall's honeysuckle on wires—it stays green most of the year. Or for a quick-growing "screen," start castor beans indoors in paper boxes—set out in the first warm weather.

What shall you plant in garden plots? Lovely are such annuals as tall-spiked blue larkspur, many-colored petunias, brilliant-hued poppies, which you can plant now.

How to start seedbeds for later planting, have continuous bloom during spring and summer? Our 40-page booklet, Gardening Made Easy, gives many suggestions on planning and budgeting complete gardens. Directions for rose and herb gardens, window and roof gardens, rock gardens and lily pools, lawns.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, Gardening Made Easy, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Mix and chill 1 cup of cooked green peas, ½ cup of cooked lima beans, 2 diced hard-cooked eggs, ½ cup of diced celery, ¼ cup of chopped pimientos, 1 tablespoon of chopped onions, 1 tablespoon of chopped parsley, ⅛ teaspoon of salt, ⅛ teaspoon of paprika and 1-3 cup of salad dressing. Serve in bowl lined with crisp salad greens.

Saga fo Table Knives

Ever hear how table knives got their round ends? The story goes that Cardinal Richelieu ordered them because a boorish guest at his table, whom he had to entertain often, persisted in picking his teeth at the table with the point of his knife. The Cardinal had all points on his knives ground down. Another legend relates that Louis XIV made it illegal in 1669 for any knives in the kingdom to have points—this law was meant to discourage assassination at mealtime.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Exercise by Dancing Is Fun and Helps to Build Willowy Figure

SNAP your fingers at a thick waistline! It's an old Spanish dance custom, and did you ever see a dancer who was anything but willowy?

Donna, feminine half of the internationally popular Donna and Medrano team, clicks her castinets nightly as she twists and whirls through a fandango, and her waist measures only 24 inches, which is in beautiful proportion to her other measurements: bust, 34 inches; hips, 36 inches.

Boredom is what keeps many women from having slim, lithe figures, Donna thinks, and exercise through dancing is sheer fun. So turn on the music to a dance tune, hold your arms overhead and snap your fingers in rhythm as you twist at the waist, and you'll find you like it.

Stretching Firms Arms

When you finish this little routine for the waist, our favorite Spanish dancer has another suggestion: keep your arms stretched overhead and shake them vigorously from the shoulders. "That will make the arms firm and round," she promises. "I know, because a friend of mine did it. She has reduced and her arms were flabby from lack of exercise."

This armwork has still another advantage—in holding the arms overhead, you effectively use the pectoral muscles, which spread across the bust and which must be kept firm for a lovely bust contour.

Donna rehearses for two hours a day and then dances every night so she never has to worry, but she thinks the most pleasant way for the average woman to keep her figure is to go dancing two or three times a week. "Some of the most attractive women we see in our travels," she says, "are older women who enjoy dancing and who do it frequently."

Dancing Best Exercise

You can dance the waltz or the tango all night without becoming too tired and without overexerting yourself. The shag, the team agrees, is too violent for most people, but "it did teach young girls something about posture—they couldn't keep on their feet unless their bodies were in balance." The less strenuous dances, however, help you to acquire a lovely, graceful posture along with a better figure.

If you need special posture work, you will profit by the following exercise:

Lie on the back on the floor with the hips close to the wall, and "walk" up the wall until the chest and feet are in one straight line. This exercise strengthens the muscles of the tummy and lower back and is so good that even Donna uses it occasionally as a "conditioner."

All your twisting and bending exercises can be done to music. Try it and see if you don't get more enjoyment than you thought possible out of a daily exercise program.

Ironing Day Wrinkle

Sprinkle clothes with warm water, roll them tightly and cover with several thicknesses of cloth. Let them stand an hour or so and they'll be easier to iron because they will be evenly dampened.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

The Thin Men

"Well, what'll you have?"

"Let's see—I believe maybe an orange juice."

"Aw, go ahead and take something stronger."

"No, I'm not taking any alcohol now. It puts on fat."

"That's the way with me. 'Say, bring us one orange juice and one buttermilk.' Well, how's business?"

"Rotten. Say, you are looking a lot thinner."

"Do you know how many pounds I've taken off in the last two months? 28½."

"I've taken off 17 pounds in the last six weeks. Well, how's business with you?"

"Rotten. Well, my doctor says I've got to lose 10 more pounds."

"This man I'm going to wants me to take off 15 more pounds. He's dead against fat. He says that's what's the trouble with people today."

"That's what all the big doctors say. Well, what do you think of the European situation?"

"Rotten. Say, you know what my doctor told me? He said that if I could get down to 155 pounds I'd actually be 15 years younger physically."

"My doctor promised me if I would take off 40 pounds altogether and get in the pink of condition, I wouldn't be a day over 35 years old."

"Fat's all that makes a man old. Have another orange juice."

"I believe I'll take grapefruit juice this time. It hasn't quite as many calories. Well, what do you think the Republicans are going to do?"

"Nothing. You know I've got my calories down to 2,000 a day."

"I never touch desserts any more. 'Oh, hello, Jim' . . . That's Jim Snapp. Did you hear about his big clean-up in wheat?

"No . . . yes . . . I believe I did. Well, the thing I'm working on now is my waistline. I've taken off 4 inches."

"I've got to take off 3 inches more. Say, I hear old Big Bigsby went bankrupt."

"Old Bill? . . . That's too bad. You know I've done a lot for my stomach with that scissors exercise."

"Well, the best thing of all to reduce the waist is the Honolulu Twist."

"Say, the bear movement—on all fours—is the best thing I've found. Have another drink?"

"No, I haven't time. I've got to walk my 5 miles."

"I walked 10 yesterday—say, boy, I WISH you'd look at that baby doll over there old Tom Gadd's picked off."

"What? . . . Where? . . . Oh, yes. Well, I tell you if you really want to get rid of fat in a hurry, the thing to do is . . ."

Selecting 'Glamour-Boys' Enlivens Essary Party

Wifely Loyalty Influences Entries, Some Of Which Won Secretary Perkins' Disapproval; Newspapermen Are Found Wanting

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

AN ALL-AMERICAN glamour-boy team was picked down to the last man yesterday as a luncheon at the Chevy Chase Club went merrily along from cocktails to coffee. Mrs. J. Fred Essary was the hostess and Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister the guest of honor, but neither suggested the subject that had almost every one of the 20 women making nominations before the "glamour eleven" was chosen.

HOPE R. MILLER

There was not much quibbling about who the captain would be. President Roosevelt's name was scarcely presented before he was elected, those not being in favor of him keeping quiet. But other members of the team did not win their places so easily. I promised I would not reveal the final result, but among those whose names came up for discussion and some argument were Attorney General Frank Murphy, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, John L. Lewis, Senator Carter Glass, Solicitor General Robert L. Jackson, Justice Felix Frankfurter and Col. Francis Harrington.

Although she suggested no one for the team, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, who was a luncheon guest, quite firmly voted against some of the candidates. In regard to others she had difficulty making up her mind.

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace declined to pass judgment on whether her husband deserved to be on the team but said with a twinkle in her eye she hoped he "would make it." Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone and Mrs. Hugo Black reserved their nominations for some other time but seemed to enjoy the game as much as anybody; while Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Minister, and Mme. Dimitri Naoumoff, wife of the Bulgarian Minister, wondered if anybody from the Diplomatic Corps could be included on the team. "Now, how about the Polish Ambassador?" began Mme. Naoumoff.

"Not a chance for him," said Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson. "This is an all-American team."

MRS. MARK BRISTOL said she had no special nominations to make "unless Admiral Bristol is eligible." And there were others in the company who showed the same loyalty by mentioning their husbands as candidates. When someone averred that the team should include a couple of newspapermen Secretary Perkins was asked for a suggestion. She could not think of a one who fitted into the glamour-boy category. On the other hand Mrs. Raymond Clapper and Mrs. Bulkley Griffin could suggest several scribes—well two at least—who could qualify.

The discussion came toward the end of a luncheon that lasted until past mid-afternoon and was such a pleasant party nobody wanted to leave. Spring accents were noted in ensembles of the guests as well as in the table decorations, which featured three low bowls of tulips, jonquils and iris.

ONE OF THE snappiest outfits there was worn by Mrs. Wilson Lee, whose light blue crepe frock was fashioned with a full skirt and fitted bodice and set off with dark red buttons to match her perky veiled hat. The hostess wore a smart black frock embellished with a beige belt to match her turban and a corsage of white orchids. Mrs. McAllister, who is known far and wide as Dorothy McAllister, head of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, had on a black ensemble.

Among others there were Mrs. Henry F. Grady, who will leave today for St. Louis, where she is scheduled to speak Thursday evening; Mrs. Casanove Lee, Mrs. William Stanley, Mrs. Harry Blair and Mrs. May Thompson Evans.

ON THE CALENDAR: The Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Ertegun have cards out for a dinner Friday night . . . Mrs. James M. Helm will entertain at luncheon Saturday . . . A noted Danish journalist (name to be announced later) will be guest of honor at a men's luncheon to be given March 17 by the Minister of Denmark, Otto Wadsted . . . Mrs. Oscar B. Ryder, wife of the United States Tariff Commissioner, has cards out for a luncheon on March 15. . . One of the most interesting visitors to Washington the past weekend was Thrya Samter Winslow, novelist and short story writer, who was down from New York for the Press Club stunt party, and stayed on for Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg's luncheon at the 1925 F street club on Saturday . . . That event, incidentally, made social history on more than one account and gathered in several out-of-town celebrities, including Margery Sharp, of London, author of "The Nutmeg Tree;" Mrs. Joseph Medill Patterson and Miss Loretta King, of New York.

Belgian Embassy Scene of Dinners

The Belgian Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz entertained at dinner last evening at the embassy on Massachusetts avenue. Among their guests were several members of the official set, as well as a number from residential circles.

The party was one in a series the Ambassador and Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz are giving this season. They will entertain again this evening.

Ambassador to Present Chinese Drama, Music

The Chinese Ambassador Dr. Hu Shih, has issued invitations to a presentation of Chinese drama and music on Tuesday evening, March 21.

The program will feature the visiting Chinese Theatrical Group and will take place at the Wardman Park Hotel at 9 o'clock. A buffet supper will follow the evening's entertainment.

Society Fetes Mrs. J. P. Martin

Mrs. John P. Martin, of Camden, Del., who is the guest of her parents, Senator and Mrs. James H. Hughes, is being widely feted during her visit here. Last evening she was guest of honor at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. T. Kinsey Carpenter at their home on Garfield street.

Guests were Mr. and Mrs. Prew Savoy, Dr. and Mrs. Mark O. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Ervin, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Ruth, Mrs. Orren Lowden, Dr. and Mrs. Rex Johnson, Mrs. Neitah King, Mrs. Harrison Miller and John Chappelear.

Mrs. T. Franklin Schneider entertained at luncheon yesterday in compliment to both Mrs. Martin and Mrs. Hughes. Among the guests were Mrs. John J. Dempsey, Mrs. John Clark, Mrs. Harry Coffee, Mrs. Phillip Ferguson, Miss Cuyler Schwartz, Miss Sue White and Mrs. Paul Peter.

Mrs. Hughes will entertain at luncheon on Thursday in compliment to Mrs. George Messersmith and Mrs. Lewis Mustard. Her daughter, Mrs. Martin, will be among the guests.

Princess to Give Dinner April 11 For Mrs. Howard

Princess Margaret Boncompagni will entertain at dinner on April 11 in honor of Miss Mary Chase Howard, daughter of Capt. Herbert Seymour Howard, U. S. N., and Mrs. Howard.

The dinner will be given at the 1925 F Street Club. Miss Howard, one of the most popular debutantes of this season, made her debut on Thanksgiving Day, a traditional day in her family. Her mother and her aunts all bowed to Washington society at Thanksgiving.

Iran Envoy Going To Buenos Aires

Dr. Ali Akbar Daftary, Counselor and Charge d'Affaires of the Iranian Legation, will leave tomorrow for Buenos Aires to attend the International Postal Conference beginning March 15.

Dr. Daftary entertained informally at dinner at the Legation last evening. Guests were the First Secretary of the Iranian Legation, Hossain Davallou, and Madame Davallou, and Miss Anna Wolcott Archibald.

John C. Wileys Register At Key West, Fla., Hotel

When Miss Betty Walson, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Charles M. Walson rides in "The Drill" at Fort Myer's "Hoofprints of 1939" next month, it'll be old stuff for her. She learned to ride when she was 8 years old, while her father was stationed at Fort Omaha, in Omaha, Nebr. She has been riding in drills and horse shows and winning cups and ribbons at it ever since

Dr. Rowe Fetes Mayor of Lima

Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union, entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Pan American annex in honor of Don Eduardo Dibos, Mayor of Lima, Peru.

The guest list included the Ambassador of Peru, Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander; Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins; Senator William H. King, Senate chairman of the D. C. Committee; Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the D. C. Committee of the House of Representatives, and Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

Still others there were Ellis O. Briggs and Dr. Ben Cherrington, of the State Department; Dr. Alexander V. Dye of the Department of Commerce; Dr. Pedro de Alba, assistant director of the Pan American Union; Thomas H. MacDonald, of the Department of Agriculture; Stephen James of the Highway Education Board, Pyke Johnson, George Bauer, Dr. William Manger, and Jose Tercero.

John L. Newcomb, Wife Entertain Virginia Faculty

At a reception yesterday honoring the faculty and administrative staff of the University of Virginia, and their wives, the President of the University and Mrs. John Lloyd Newcomb entertained at their home on Carrs Hill, Charlottesville. More than 375 guests attended.

Assisting at the tea table were Mrs. Robert Bennett Bean, Mrs. Albert G. A. Balz, Mrs. Llewllyn G. Moxton and Mrs. Samuel Alfred Mitchell. Spring flowers banked the dining and drawing rooms for the occasion. Forty wives of faculty members assisted with the serving.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Give Small Supper Party

Mr. and Mrs. Casanove Lee entertained a small company at supper last evening following the meeting of the Ice Club of Washington.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Wright and Mr. and Mrs. Allan Fay. The party took place at the Lee home on Newark street.

Paul Maloneys Return From New Orleans Visit

Representative and Mrs. Paul H. Maloney, who have been visting in New Orleans at their summer home in Pass Christian, Miss., returned yesterday to their apartment at the Wardman Park.

During their stay in New Orleans, Mrs. Maloney was entertained at a series of luncheons and bridge parties and attended the Mardi Gras and carnival festivities.

With her daughter, Mrs. Fernand C. Gandolfo, jr., Mrs. Maloney entertained at a large tea last Friday at her daughter's new home in New Orleans in honor of Mrs. Albert A. Jones, of Washington, who is visiting there. Mrs. Maloney also entertained in honor of Mrs. Alfred A. Ferrandou, of Washington, who visited her family in New Orleans recently.

Miss Ford Wed To Lt. Harvey

The marriage, February 25, of Miss Frances Ford, daughter of Mrs. Harry G. Ford, Pacific Grove, Calif., to Lieut. Clinton Harvey, U. S. A., son of Col. and Mrs. Clarence C. Harvey, of Washington, has just been announced.

The wedding took place at St. John's Chapel, Del Monte, Calif., and was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's mother.

Mrs. A. J. Hirsch, of San Francisco, was the bride's only attendant. Lieut. John Tillson, of Fort Bliss, Tex., was the best man and fellow officers of the bridegroom were the ushers.

The couple will make their home in Fort Sill, Okla., where Lieut. Harvey has been assigned. He was graduated from West Point last June.

Mrs. James Moore Gives Luncheon For Mrs. Rowell

Mrs. James T. Moore gave a luncheon at the Shoreham yesterday in honor of Mrs. Ross Rowell, wife of Col. Rowell, chief of the Marine Air Corps. Mrs. Moore is known in music circles as Fannie Helner, director of music at National Park College.

Other guests included Mrs. Barton Yount, wife of Brig. Gen. Yount, assistant to the Chief of the Air Corps, who has recently come to Washington; Mrs. James Shera Montgomery, wife of the Chaplain of the House of Representatives; Mrs. Rowell's sister and the latter's daughter, Mrs. Lenore Williams, Miss Franc Williams, of Coronado, Calif.; Mrs. C. R. Burchard and Mrs. Edward Larkin.

Aranha to Perform Godfather's Role

Oswaldo Aranha, foreign minister of Brazil, will act in an unusual official capacity just before his departure for his homeland.

Sometime within the next couple of days he will find time to be godfather at the christening of little Maria Elena Araujo, baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guilherme Araujo. Senhor Araujo is attached to the Brazilian Embassy and Maria is a very new member of the Araujo family, having arrived within the last ten days.

First Lady Heads 'Candida' List

Mrs. Roosevelt heads the list of patronesses for the Bryn Mawr Club benefit performance of "Candida" on Monday, March 20. Cornelia Otis Skinner, a former student at Bryn Mawr, is the star of the play.

Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes is another on the list of patronesses, others on it being Lady Lindsay, Senora de Espil, Countess van der Straton-Ponthoz; Senora de Lopez, Mme. Peter, Mme. Bostrom, Mrs. Ralph William Close, Mme. Hassan.

Also, Mrs. Pierce Butler, Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, Mrs. Henry A. Wallace and Miss Frances Perkins.

Still others on the list are Mrs. Robert Taft, Mrs. Malin Craig, Craig, Mrs. William D. Leahy, Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Princess Margaret Boncompagni, the Misses Ida and Pauletta Guffey, Mrs. Frederic Chapin, Mrs. Edward Meigs, Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, Mrs. William R. Castle, Mrs. Luke Wilson, Mrs. Huston Thompson, Mrs. Duncan Phillips and Mrs. Corrin Strong.

The Livesays, Of Honolulu, Visiting Capital

Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Livesay, of Honolulu, are in Washington for a few days and are staying at the Hotel Raleigh. From here, they will go to New York for a brief stay before sailing for Italy on the Rex.

Mr. Livesay is dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at the University of Hawaii. He and Mrs. Livesay stopped in Washington State for several days to visit their daughter at the University of Washington.

Also at the Raleigh are Ruby Lafoon, former Governor of Kentucky, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fitzhugh, of Little Rock. Mr. Fitzhugh is a member of the Arkansas State Department of Public Utilities.

French Envoy Host for Dinner And Bridge

Bostroms and Barbours Are Ranking Guests; Mme. Benech Hostess

The French Ambassador, Count Rene Doynel de Saint Quentin, entertained at a dinner last evening, followed by bridge. The Swedish Minister and Mme. Bostrom and Senator and Mrs. Warren Barbour were ranking guests. Mme. Benech, wife of the Naval Attache of the embassy, acted as hostess.

The other guests were the Counselor of the Belgian embassy and Baroness de Gruben, Mrs. John R. Williams, Mrs. Joseph Leiter, Mr. and Mrs. C. Mathews Dick, Mrs. S. Kent Legare, Mr. and Mrs. J. Pierrepont Moffat, Mrs. Lee Warren, Myron Hofer, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Garrett, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, Mr. and Mrs. William McKee Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Perin, Baron and Baroness d'Epremesnil, Col. Francis Harrington, Angus Malcolm and Charles Spruks.

The ambassador will entertain at another dinner Thursday.

Social Notables Attend Play

Washington society turned out in droves last night for "The Philadelphia Story," Philip Barry's play featuring Katharine Hepburn. The huge audience filling the National Theater to the walls was heavily studded with notables, including several who have been seen rarely at first nights this season.

As would be expected, the usual carriage trade that is on hand for usual openings was also there full force last night. In fact, it looked as if everybody was there. To mention but a few who were seen as they were ushered down the aisles or as they chatted in little clusters in the lobby between acts—there was Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings, Senator Theodore F. Green, the Misses Ida and Pauletta Guffey, Mrs. James M. Helm, who arrived in a party that included Miss Laura Harlan; Dr. and Mrs. Charles Stanley White, who recently returned from a trip to California; Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin.

A very important member of the audience was Philip Barry, down from New York especially to see how Washington took his play. Still others in the crowd were Mrs. George T. Summerlin, jr., Miss Maisie Howard, with a handsome escort; Mrs. Granger Blair and Arthur Krock, Mrs. William A. Morgan, who had with her Mrs. J. Fred Essary; D. C. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Miss Katherine Overton, Mrs. Louis G. Caldwell, the naval attache of the Italian Embassy, Capt. Don Umberto Cugia, who is a regular "first nighter;" Mr. and Mrs. Abner Drury and scores of others.

State Department Already Deluged With Letters Asking to Meet Royalty

THREE MONTHS before the arrival of the King and Queen of England, George T. Summerlin, chief of protocol, is already being deluged with letters from unknowns who want to meet them. We hear that the entertainment at the British Embassy in their honor will take the form of a garden party. If Lady Lindsay disappears sometime between now and June, it will probably be discovered that she has been buried beneath anavalanche of calling cards.

ELEANOR WILSON McADOO'S first book, "The Woodrow Wilsons," will be followed by a novel which will appear shortly in a woman's magazine.

The daughter of the late Woodrow Wilson, and former wife of William G. McAdoo, has just left Washington after a brief visit. She stopped with Miss Helen Bones, a cousin of the Wilsons, who spent a great deal of time with them at the White House early in the Administration and who figures in Mrs. McAdoo's book. Mrs. McAdoo was entertained at the Executive Mansion during her stay here. She lives in California.

SPEAKING of books, State Department members are shuddering at Martha Dodd's outspoken "Through Embassy Eyes," in which she tells about her impressions of Naziland during her father's term as Ambassador there.

THOUGH the Washington Bryn Mawr Club is taking over Cornelia Otis Skinner's "Candida" for its annual scholarship benefit here, members feel quite warmly about that other distinguished former Bryn Mawr student, Katharine Hepburn, appearing here this week. When Miss Hepburn starred in "Jane Eyre," the club took over a night for its benefit, but the play didn't go over well enough to pay the club's expenses for the house. When the actress heard about it she immediately made up the several hundred dollars' deficit out of her own pocket. Incidentally, her former husband, Ludlow Smith, is a brother of L. M. C. Smith, who makes his home in Washington, and is with the New Deal.

One of Katharine's younger brothers is a so far unsuccessful playwright. When the Hepburn sommer home in Connecticut was blown 2 miles from base in the hurricane last fall, members of the family drove down to dig in the sand for silver and other valuables. The only thing they found was a pile of the unlucky plays completely unharmed.

Because an understudy had to be substituted in the opening of her new play at the last moment, Miss Hepburn will spend most of her time here rehearsing and will probably not attend any social functions. Former Bryn Mawr classmates of hers here say she was well liked at college and not alarmingly temperamental.

THE Washington Ice Club will end its first season in a blaze of waltzes, leaps and grand marches. Invitations are being sent out to various members of Capital society for an exhibition to be held at the rink on Sunday morning, March 26, from 12 to 1.

Dorothy Snell, leading national figure skater, and Mrs. Arthur Clephane, the best performer in the club, will give solo exhibitions.

There will also be a group exhibition of club members, in which performers will probably include Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, Mr. and Mrs. John Borton, Mr. and Mrs. Creighton Peet and Miss Carol Agar. A grand march by all members who can skate without wobbling will conclude the program.

TOMORROW night is certainly an evening for dinners. In addition to Mrs. David Barry's, already announced, the hosts include Mrs. S. Kent Legare, Robert Coe and Angus Malcolm of the British Embassy . . . The Peruvian envoy, Manuel de Freyre y Santander, will give a dinner on Thursday evening . . . Miss Marion Trumbull has returned from a rest cure at Mrs. George Sloane's home in Warrenton and will continue the same here this week.

Edges to Honor Miss Dillingham

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Edge will entertain at a small dance on Easter Monday for the younger set in honor of Miss Betty Lou Dillingham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dillingham, of Honolulu.

Mrs. Dillingham and her daughter, who frequently visit in Washington, have arrived for a stay with Mrs. Charles Henderson. Miss Dillingham was graduated last June from Foxcraft and is a debutante of the season.

The Dillinghams are among the leading families in Honolulu, and have a beautiful home where they have entertained many notables, including the Duke of Windsor when he was Prince of Wales.

Mrs. Edge recently returned to the Capital after a stay of several months at her Georgia plantation.

No Place in America For Bund, Capper Says

Kansas Senator, Addressing Republican Women, Advocates Deportation of Aliens Guilty of 'Ism' Activities

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

There is no place in America for German-Bund Storm Troopers, Senator Arthur Capper asserted yesterday in an address before the League of Republican Women at the Mayflower Hotel. Advocating adequate national defense, a policy of strict neutrality and a constitutional amendment providing for a referendum on war, the Kansas Senator declared "the job for Republican leadership is to save the United States as a government of free people, as a land of equal opportunity, as an indestructible union of indestructible States."

Jessie A. Arndt

Advocating the deportation of aliens guilty of Nazi or Communist activities, Senator Capper said: "We don't want, in this country, an era of persecution of minority. We don't want Jewish pogroms. We don't want the goosestep. We don't want nazism. We don't want Hitlerism nor do we want that other governmental monstrosity, communism, Stalinism. We want to keep Americanism."

Asserting "the time has come for us to take stock of the aliens in our midst," he urged Congressional action to prohibit the uniforming, drilling and disciplining of aliens into military organizations such as the Storm Troopers; deportation of criminal aliens, and those preaching destruction of our form of government; tightening of immigration restrictions and deportation of aliens who do not take out first papers within a year after they enter the Unitde States.

"Those who neglect to apply for citizenship or who fail to complete naturalization as soon as they can are not entitled to the privileges and opportunities which are theirs if they choose to accept them," he pointed out. "There are too many of our own people without jobs today for us to continue to pass out jobs to those aliens who do not think enough of this country to become citizens when they have the opportunity."

Country Should Take Stock of Aliens

Senator Capper also discussed a constitutional amendment I have been trying to have submitted for the past 20 years, which would stop alien representation in the National House of Representatives."

"The proposed amendment to the Constitution I have introduced in the Senate simply provides that representation shall be based on the whole number of citizens instead of the whole number of persons in each State in apportioning representatives in the National House of Representatives. That would exclude aliens from the count.

States Get Too Many Congressmen

"The present system gives the States with large alien populations approximately 33 more Congressmen than they would be entitled to if aliens were excluded from this count."

Senator Capper declared he was opposed to "secret alliances and undercover agreements" with foreign nations and expresed confidence that we can and shall keep out of the "mess" in which Europe and Asia find themselves.

He predicted a Republican victory in 1940 and charged the New Deal with failure in solving the farm problem and others the country faces. "During the period when one branch of the Administration was making every effort to curtail American production, another branch of the New Deal was hard at work increasing the imports of the very crops which it was restricting," he said. "The farmers of America are through with 'compulsory' New Deal programs to make them grow rich by producing less. The workers of America are through with the New Deal business program of trying to put them to work by discouraging the businessmen from expanding."

Senator Capper was introduced by Mrs. Edward E. Gann, president of the league, who is herself a Kansan and sister of the late former Vice President Charles Curtis.

Dinner Honors Miss Bresnahan

The home economics teachers of the Washington public schools gave a dinner last night at Tilden Gardens hohoring Miss Katherine E. Bresnahan, recently retired from the teaching staff. She taught homemaking in the public schools of Washington from 1905 to February of this year, her teaching work beginning 15 years before junior high schools were organized in this city.

Robert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent of schools; Miss Florence Mortimer, principal of Wheatley School, and Miss Emma S. Jacobs, former head of the home economics department of Washington schools, were among 60 guests.

Mrs. Olga Day Rush, present head of the home economics department, presided and H. W. Draper, supervising principal of the first division, extended greetings to Miss Bresnahan.

Goucher Students To Fete Mrs. Hull

Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, is in Baltimore, where she will be guest of honor at a reception to be given this afternoon by Mrs. David Allen Robertson, wife of the president of Goucher College. The party will be held in the president's house on the campus.

Guests will include members of the senior and junior classes at Goucher.

Miss Cattell Here to Begin Duties as Girl Scout Captain

Illinoisan Succeeds Miss Catherine Carter As District Leader; Members to Mark Twenty-seventh Anniversary Saturday

Miss Mary Helen Cattell has arrived from Western Springs, Ill., a suburb of Chicago, to take up her work as a field captain of the D. C. Girl Scouts. She succeeds Miss Catherine Carter, who has gone to Front Royal, Va., to conduct a gift shop.

Miss Cattell will work with Miss Florence Jennings, another field captain, who has been here since June 1937, and will have charge of the troops of Districts 1, 3 and 5, as well as the summer day camps of the Girl Scouts.

Miss Cattell, a graduate of Oberlin College, has been in professional Girl Scout work for the past year and has been a member of the organization since she was 10. For three years she was a camp counsellor at the Chicago Girl Scout Camp and last year, at the Flint, Mich., Camp.

She majored in French at Oberlin and has as her hobbies the sports one would expect of a Girl Scout—swimming, tennis, basketball, sailing and also ice-boating.

Saturday the twenty-seventh anniversary of the founding of the Girl Scouts of America will be celebrated at the National Girl Scouts Little House, 1750 New York avenue, with Mrs. Robert Taft, of Ohio, as honor guest. The first Girl Scout meeting in this country was called March 12, 1912, by Juliette Low, in Savannah, Ga. The anniversary is being observed on March 11 because the exact date falls on Sunday.

The party is being planned by the Girl Scout commissioner of Prince Georges County, Md., Mrs. C. L. Aiello, with Troop 3, of Hyattsville, and its leader, Miss Doris Jarvis, assisting. The 500,000 Girl Scouts throughout the country will join in similar celebrations during the week of March 12. On March 15, Mrs. Frederick H. Brooke, of Washington, national president, and Mrs. Herbert Hoover, of Palo Alto, Calif., honorary vice president, will be honor guests in New York City and will broadcast.

In the celebration here Saturday, Girl Scouts from the choral club of District 4, under Miss Carolyn O. Green, will furnish the music.

Mrs. Rosenstein Speaks on ORT

Mrs. Emily M. Rosenstein, chairman of the national organizing committee of the ORT, will address the Washington Chapter of the Women's American ORT at an open meeting at the Burlington Hotel.

At 8 o'clock Thursday evening her subject will be "A Practical Plan in the Present Jewish Crisis Abroad."

The purpose of ORT is promotion of industrial and agricultural work among Jews. It was founded in 1880. After the World War, ORT organizations were established in many countries. In 1921 they formed a world ORT Union which at present has 130 branches in 16 countries.

ORT trains juveniles and adults for industrial and agricultural occupations. Many thousands of Jewish artisans in various countries of eastern Europe are being supplied by ORT with modern machinery, tools and raw materials.

Ida Jean Kain Will Address D. C. Dietitians

Ida Jean Kain, whose column "Your Figure, Madame!" has helped to streamline many Washingtonians, will address a dinner meeting of the D. C. Dietetic Association Thursday night at the Dodge Hotel. She will give an illustrated lecture, not with slides, but with a physical education student from the Marjorie Webster School, to show just how her famous exercises are done.

There are accommodations for only 100 to attend the dinner, which will be held in the Garden House of the hotel. Each member is limited to one guest. Miss Rowena Roberts, of Sibley Hospital, 1140 North Capitol street, is in charge of reservations and it has been announced they must be made early because of the limitation of the number.

Brackenridge Club Here Gets 'Day' in Texas

Gov. O'Daniel Sets Today for 'Friendship' Observation

A group of 30 girls in Washington, organized under the name of the National M. Eleanor Brackenridge Club, is responsible for a proclamation by Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel of Texas, calling on people of the Lone Star State to observe today as Friendship Day.

Mrs. Erich Schwartze, founder and president of the Washington club, received the first M. Eleanor Brackenridge scholarship at the Texas State College for Women and formed the club to perpetuate the ideals which Miss Brackenridge promoted during her life.

From the time of its founding a year ago the club's members have planned to encourage general observance of a national Friendship Day when "old friends are to be remembered kindly, tenderly, in greeting by notes, letters or even small tokens. Friendship Day is a day in which friends who have become estranged may resume the lovely tie of friendship," says the card sent all over the country by the club, quoting Miss Brackenridge's message on "Friendship."

The Woman's Club of San Antonio, where she was for years a leader in civic and club work, has joined the Washington girls in promoting the plan of the Friendship Day observance and added its request to that of the club here that the Governor issue a proclamation setting aside the day.

Groups throughout the State have observed it ever since Miss Brackenridge advanced the idea in 1921, but this is the first time it has been proclaimed.

Mrs. Schwartze, although she has lived in Washington 22 years, has never lost sight of the ideals of the woman to whose generosity she was indebted for part of her education.

The local club will have a banquet at Wesley Hall tonight which the Rev. Edward Hughes Pruden of First Baptist Church will speak on "The Greatest of All Friends;" G. E. Dunkum, of the Board of Education, on "Friendship in Business;" W. H. Hilligeist, of Baltimore, on "The Value of Friendship," and Mrs. Schwartze on the life of Miss Brackenridge.

Officers serving with Mrs. Schwartze are Mrs. Isaac Pugh, vice president; Miss Louise Fincham, recording secretary; Miss France Mesteken, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Glenn Crittenden, treasurer.

Colonial Dames To Give Tea for National President

Mrs. William Holland Wilmer will have as her guest today and tomorrow Mrs. Joseph B. Hutchinson, of Bryn Mawr, Pa., president of the Colonial Dames of America. The District Society is giving a reception in Mrs. Hutchinson's honor tomorrow from 4 to 6 o'clock at Dumbarton House.

Assisting at the tea table will be Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Breckinridge Long, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Warren Austin, Miss Agnes Peter, Mrs. Charles Willcox, Mrs. Cazenove Lee, Mrs. Edward Avery Harriman, Mrs. Reginald Huidekoper, Mrs. Wilson Lee, Mrs. Charles D. Walcott, Mrs. N. Price Whitaker; also assisting will be Mrs. Charles Baird, jr., Mrs. William M. Cruikshank, Mrs. H. L. E. Johnson, Mrs. Paul Johnson, Miss Louise King, Mrs. Richard LaGarde, Mrs. Charles S. Mackall, Mrs. Walter G. Peter, Miss Aimee E. Powell, Miss Elizabeth Sypher, Mrs. Horace Torbert, officers and members of the society. The museum will be closed during the reception.

Mrs. Fairfax Harrison is president of the District Society.

Henry Quinn to Address P.-T. A. on Distrcit Plan

Henry Quinn, will address a mass meeting of Parent-Teacher associations in the area of Powell Junior High School Thursday night at 8 o'clock to discuss the Griffenhagen report on reorganization of the District government as it applies to education.

Associations included will be those of Hubbard, Cooke, Adams, Bancroft, Raymond-Force and Ross schools.

Powell Junior High School Association will have its regular meeting tomorrow night at 8 o'clock with Dr. Chester A. Holmes, assistant superintendent in charge of junior high schools, as the speaker. He will discuss the vocational school set-up in the District.

Somerset P.-T. A. to Hear Dr. W. R. Ballard Tonight

The March meeting of the Somerset P.-T. A. will be held at 8 o'clock tonight at Somerset School, Dr. W. R. Ballard, of the University of Maryland, as speaker. His topic is "Improving the Home Grounds." Layout plans, plants, trees, shrubs and flowers will be shown.

Proposed changes in the constitution and bylaws, already approved by the executive committee, will be submitted to the association for indorsement, and the nominating committee will submit nominations of officers for the 1939-40 school year.

Preliminary arrangements will also be made for a St. Patrick's Day dance.

Forest Hills

Approval of the Griffenhagen reorganization report in principle was voted by the Forest Hills Citizens Association at a meeting at Ben Murch School.

Restoration of the Pierce Mill picnic grounds in Rock Creek Park to its "condition prior" to construction of the storage dam also was recommended.

An amendment reserving complete approval of the Griffenhagen report until further clarification of its departmentalization and economic aspects was voted after a discussion of the plan by Charles D. Hamel, Gen. Mason Patrick and George C. Havenner, former president of the Federation.

A resolution to seek prohibition by the Alcohol Control Board of sale of beer and alcoholic beverages to occupants of automobiles was passed after it was reported minor children had been sold alcoholic beverages at a curb service barbecue establishment.

Bladensburg Road

The newly proposed income tax as opposed to the sales tax was indorsed by the Bladensburg Road Citizens Association after a talk by H. E. Riley, representing the committee on fair taxation.

Also indorsed were Senator Sheppard's resolution to establish a committee to investigate advisability of eliminating Class A liquor stores and establish instead District-owned dispensaries; legislation requiring a scientific test for intoxication for all motorists involved in accidents, which has been proposed by the United Dry Forces of the District, and a proposed revision of the alcoholic beverage control act.

Kenilworth

Continuation of the Board of Education as an independent agency was advocated by the Kenilworth Citizens Association.

Establishment of Government-owned liquor dispensaries within the District was opposed on the ground the system would permit large-scale corruption and graft.

The organization also adopted a resolution declaring that enforcement of existing regulations would eliminate the need for change in the existing set-up of liquor selling.

Separation of the legislative and executive functions of the District government also won the favor of the Association, which voted for a legislative body to be composed of members who had been District residents for at least five years.

Takoma Park

The Citizens Association of Takoma Park, District of Columbia, indorsed L. J. Cantrell, principal of Paul Junior High School, to be principal of the uncompleted Calvin Coolidge High School at Fifth and Sheridan streets northwest.

Another resolution passed by the association condemned the entire section of the Griffenhagen report dealing with public schools and indorsed the plan of President Roosevelt's advisory committee on education.

The nominating committee submitted the following list of candidates for office:

Manor Park

In approving the plan organization members urged, however, election of the city manager and council.

The association urged enactment of regulations forbidding licensing of a liquor store within 400 feet of a school building and disapproved the Dirkson bill which would legalize sale of liquor over lunch counters.

Metropolis View

The Metropolis View Citizens Association opposed the Congressional move to investigate the District liquor sales system with the view of replacing private stores with Government operated dispensaries.

The unit also voted against approval of the federation's report on the Griffenhagen plan, with members suggesting that suffrage in the District be limited to representation in Congress and in the Presidential electoral college.

Progressive of Georgetown

The Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown adopted a resolution in favor of continuance of the Board of Education as an independent agency of the District government.

Consolidation of other departments and boards as recommended by the Griffenhagen report was advocated.

Congress Hts. Progressives

The Congress Heights Progressive Citizens Association elected Mrs. L. M. Richmond secretary and admitted 12 new members.

Resolutions were passed indorsing the Overton plan on taxation for the District and opposing erection of the Lorton Reformatory wharf on the Anacostia River between the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge and Eleventh street southeast.

Traffic Takes 2 More Lives; Toll Now 20

Bicyclist Enters Car Door, Autoist Faces Charge of Assault

Traffic took two more lives in Washington last night, bringing the city's 1939 toll to 20, two above the score in 1938.

The latest victims were Mrs. Mary Biddle, 72, of 17 Bryant street northwest, and Norman Sinins, 60, a pencil vendor, who lived at the Gospel Mission, John Marshal place and C street northwest. Simms was struck down by an auto at Third and K streets northeast last night.

Injured January 30

Mrs. Biddle was struck by an auto at Rhode Island avenue and Logan Circle northwest January 30. She died in Emergency Hospital yesterday.

Eugene Kenerdine, 50, of 1924 Shepherd street northeast, will appear before a coroner's jury in connection with Mrs. Biddle's death.

A coroner's jury yesterday exonerated Fred W. Stabley, 23, of 2453 Wisconsin avenue northwest, driver of a truck which struck Thomas J. Keating, 66, of 1607 Thirty-fifth street northwest, in the 1200 block Twenty-ninth street northwest last Friday. Keating died at Emergency Hospital the same day of a fractured skull.

Harvey Bartell, 19, of 1436 R street northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital for cuts and possible concussion of the brain after the accident which occurred in the 1200 block Fourteenth street northwest.

Policeman R. M. Kesselring, Thirteenth Precinct, said Nick Charuhas, 59, of Arlington, Va., parked his automobile and opened the door in Bartell's path.

Capital News In Brief

Heigh-Ho to Reopen

Plans are under way to reopen the Heigh-Ho Club, rendezvous of socialites and Government officials, which was closed several months ago, it was learned yesterday.

New York interests propose to revive the night spot in the 1500 block Connecticut avenue northwest, under the name of Whig Club, and to open April 1. Anne Kiess, daughter of the late Representative, who was with the Heigh-Ho Club, and Ella Craddock, Lynchburg debutante, are to be entertainers.

Bulldog Causes Wreck

A small bulldog named "Boodle" was responsible for a freak wreck last night on Pennsylvania avenue just west of Thirteenth street northwest.

Miss Inez Collins, 27, of 1416 R street northwest, driving a car, said "Boodle" started jumping around at her side on the front seat. Miss Collins lost control of the auto which caromed off a loading platform and wedged itself beneath the rear end of a street car.

A passenger, Mrs. Beatrice Miller, 1402 Fifteenth street northwest, was treated for possible fracture of two ribs.

Braille Stories Stolen

Will whoever removed several short stories from the office of Mrs. Frances M. Irwin in the Washington Building please return them? You won't enjoy them anyhow—they are written in braille.

Mrs. Irwin, an employe of the Treasury Department, writes braille as a hobby. The stories were transcribed for blind beneficiaries of the Red Cross.

Marvin Drops Rule of G. W. Graduate Unit

Dr. Bolwell Gets Post In Shift Involving 4 Other Staff Members

Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, president of George Washington University, relinquished yesterday his place as head of the university's graduate council, which governs the granting of doctor of philosophy degrees, and announced admministrative changes affecting five top-ranking faculty members.

Affected by the shake-up were:

Dr. Robert Whitney Bolwell, who drops his deanship of the university's summer session to become acting chairman of the graduate council. Dr. Bolwell will continue as professor of American literature.

Dr. Mitchell Dreese, who has been relieved of his duties as executive officer of the department of psychology to become acting summer session dean. Dr. Dreese is professor of educational psychology.

Dr. Thelma Hunt, who has been made acting executive officer of the psychology department.

Dr. Donnell Brooks Young, professor of zoology, who has been made acting assistant dean of the junior college in charge of science and pre-medical curricula.

Dr. Ira Bowers Hansen, associate professor of psychology, who was named acting executive officer of the department of zoology.

The graduate council, an innovation in academic organization widely praised as an effective means of directing graduate research, has been under Dr. Marvin's charge since its organization in 1930.

Join Hands, Berle Urges Democracies

Hull Aide Declares Co-operation Alone Can Stem Advance Of Totalitarianism

Co-operation with the peace-loving democracies to stem the totalitarian advance was urged last night by Adolf A. Berle, jr., Assistant Secretary of State. "Nations which project as part of their program a doctrine of world subjugation, whether of force, or through attack by propaganda on our democratic social system, necessarily compel us toward defensive measures," he said.

"We are fairly entitled to consider whether the defense of our own institutions may not require assistance in one form or another to those nations who, like ourselves, desire to keep the peace," he continued.

Issue Not Far Off

Delivering the Bronson Cutting Memorial Lecture in Constitution Hall, Berle declared that "war conditions, in all economic and social aspects, already exist in many parts of the world." Eventual issue of the controversy is "not very far off," he asserted, as no country can continue long under the present burden of armaments.

Emphasizing that "it is not for us to regulate or censor the ideals or methods of other nations, so long as they do not affect us," Berle added "there obviously is a limit. Governments which arm, and persistently threaten war, directly affect us," he continued.

Defends Foreign Policy

Berle ridiculed the charge that our foreign policy is "unclear," saying it was impossible and unnecessary to "state in advance exactly what will be done under future circumstances which can be neither foreseen nor stated." He outlined a three-point program for "democratic peace:" first, economic freedom for every country which desires it; second, disarmament, and third, the acceptance of a "rule of law," as the basis of international relations.

Praising the Declaration of Lima as an "international bill of rights," Berle declared that the doctrines laid down at this and previous Pan-American conferences had achieved a "degree of permanence unknown in the political relations of the rest of the world." The Lima Conference took a step forward, he said, in defining the position of the Pan-American group of nations with regard to the rest of the world.

Wife Asks Court To Hold Estate of Henderson Butler

Mrs. Sobretta Brown Shima, of 1214 Linden street northeast, yesterday asked District Court to prevent her Japanese husband, Jesse S. Shima, from leaving the country and to attach the $67,000 he received from the estate of Mrs. Mary F. Henderson, for whom he was buiter.

Mrs. Shima said her husband left her in February, 1938. She asked a legal separation on grounds of cruelty, charging among other things that Shima made "derogatory statements about this country in that he stated that all the officials were stupid . . ."

Mrs. Henderson left Shima $100,000 cash and $100,000 in trust. He received $40,000 in a settlement with her heirs and the promise of $27,000 more.

Irregular Mail Service Laid to Cupid

Aroused by irregular deliveries, Forest Hills Citizens Association last night voted to ask the Post-office Department to "investigate" the community mail service.

Citizens reported their mail was arriving from one to three hours late while one said his frequently failed to arrive at all.

Life Begins at 70

Etchings, at 73, Still Delight Friends of William F. Peabody

WILLIAM F. PEABODY

A Full Life This Retired Federal Worker Lives and He Has Program for Years to Come

[This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.]

By Gerald G. Gross.

William F. Peabody not only invites you in to see his etchings, he sends them out once a year in the form of Christmas cards.

In a sense, he is making a busman's holiday in his retirement. Chief of the engraving section, Coast and Geodetic Survey, when he left Government service in 1935, he has been spending the greater part of his leisure time since with needle and graver. However, he mas many other interests also.

At the age of 73, Peabody has a work program laid out that would floor a younger man.

There is the book he is writing, a history of his family in story form. His wife will be the heroine.

There is the matter of literature. During his Government career, which lasted 49 years, he found time for only a few of the books which he has always wanted to read. Now he is engaged in checking the "best book" selections of the experts, acquiring the "cream of the crop" from the pens of Dickens, Tolstoi, Galsworthy, Twain and other immortals.

Photography is another hobby which he is following with greater zeal than ever. He produces pictures—especially pastoral and marine scenes—which would do credit to professionals.

The current traffic safety campaign also is claiming Peabody's attention. He was first president of the Washington Safety First Association.

Gardening is another reason time never hangs heavy on the Peabody shoulders. The grounds of his home at 1503 Delafield place northwest are planted with crocus, tulips, jonquils and roses.

Public Urged To Give Lent Real Meaning

'Retrace Steps of Jesus,' Dr. Lawson Pleads At Lutheran Services

If the Lenten season is to have a real meaning, the people must "retrace Jesus' footprints on the Jerusalem road," said Dr. Evald W. Lawson, president of Upsala College, said last night, addressing Union Lutheran Lenten services sponsored by the Washington Lutheran Ministerial Association at Grace Lutheran Church.

"We are asked to live ourselves into a bit of sacred history—40 days of penitence, devotion and sacrifice," said he, adding that "Lent is meaningles for millions."

Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski, pastor of Grace Church, presided at the services. Dr. Arthur O. Hjelm, of the Augustana Lutheran Church, read the Scripture, and the Grace Choir furnished music.

Among the 400 guests were Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen, pastor of Luther Place Memorial Church, and president of the Maryland Synod of the United Lutheran Church, and Mrs. Rasmussen. The next meeting is slated for Monday, March 13, at Reformation Lutheran Church, 212 East Capitol street, with Dr. Ralph H. Long.

Diplomat's Car Stolen

A convertible coupe belonging to Count W. van Rechteren Limpurg, counselor and charge d'affaires of the Netherlands Legation, was stolen last night. The car has diplomatic license plates No. 251.

Picket Claims F. B. I. Refused to Hunt Child

Contending her daughter was kidnaped in 1922, Mrs. Estelle Griffiths, Eleventh and I streets northwest, picketed the Federal Bureau of Investigation yesterday because that organization refused, she said, to aid in the search.

Labor Unites To Back Hotel Strike

Both CIO and AFL Pledge Aid; New Negotiations Open At 10 A. M. Today

Support by the bulk of Washington's organized labor forces of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' Alliance in its dispute with 13 local hotel operators, was assured last night as the Central Labor Union (A. F. L.) and the Washington Industrial Union Council (C. I. O.) both unanimously offered their assistance.

Strikers, meeting in continuous session at strike headquarters, 429 Eleventh street northwest, cheered wildly when the action was announced by International Vice President-at-Large James McNamara. The resolution by the Central Labor Union followed an appeal by Vice President Miguel Garriga. The striking union is a member of the American Federation of Labor.

Negotiations Today

Resumption of negotiations in the dispute, which has caused two hotels to be struck and threatened a general strike of all hotels in the District, was scheduled for 10 a. m. today at the Willard. Sitting in on the parley will be representatives of the union, the hotels and the National Labor Relations Board.

Joseph McGarraghy, attorney for the 13 hotels, had previously refused to reopen negotiations because union requests were not signed in the name of the Local Joint Executive Board, named bargaining agent for the union by the NLRB.

Other labor difficulties appeared on the local scene yesterday when widespread picketing of construction jobs was threatened by the United Building Trades Federation, an independent group of plasterers, metal lathers and hod carriers.

Picketing Warned

Jerry Bradley, president of Local 7 of the federation, warned that District construction projects of the Contracting Plasterers' Association, manned by A. F. of L. workers after 400 members of the independent union walked out Wednesday, would be picketed.

Bradley said the walkout was called when officials of the management group refused to consider demands for 25 cents an hour increases for an 8-hour day.

SNEAD-GULDAHL WIN ON 39TH HOLE

Home Stretch Rally Defeats Wood, Burke

4-Hole Lead Wasted In Miami 4-Ball Play; Picard, Revolta Also Are Victorious

By the Associated Press.

Coral Gables, Fla., March 6.—Ralph Guldahl, whose poise under fire won him two National Open championships, calmly rapped a 15-foot putt into the cup for a birdie on the third extra hole today as he and Sam Snead came from far back to eliminate Craig Wood and Bill Burke in the second round of the $5,000 international four-ball golf tournament.

Four down at noon after Wood and Burke had fired an 8-under-par best ball of 63, Snead and Guldahl came battling down the home stretch to send the match into overtime.

The thirty-seventh hole was halved in birdie 4s, the next in par 3s as both Snead and Guldahl missed short putts, and then Ralph came through. Wood suddenly went to pieces, taking 2 strokes to get out of a bunker. Burke chipped weakly, but had a 12-foot putt for a par 4 when Guldahl ended it.

Shute-Hogan Bow

Little less sensational was the rally of Horton Smith and Paul Runyan, who staged a minor upset by ousting Denny Shute and Ben Hogan, 1 up. Smith and Runyan were 3 down to a morning 63 by Shute and Hogan, and were still 2 behind at the twenty-seventh. Shute and Hogan faltered slightly, however, to allow Smith and Runyan to pull up even and it was a dogfight to the final green.

There Smith, famed for his putting, rolled a 40-footer into the cup as if the ball had eyes and the eagle 3 was too much for Shute and Hogan.

Johnny Revolta and Henry Picard, three-time winners of this tournament, turned in a more prosaic 4-and-3 victory over E. J. (Dutch) Harrison and Ray Mangrum to reach the semifinals.

Picard Worried

Picard was a bit worried about the slight illness at Charleston, S. C., of his 7-year-old son, Billy, but he didn't let it affect his game. As always, he and Revolta teamed beautifully for a 65 and 1-up lead in the morning. They increased that margin to three holes at the twenty-seventh and won handily.

Johnny Farrell and Willie Klein, who leaped into prominence by eliminating last year's winners, Dick Metz and Ky Laffoon, in yesterday's first round, didn't last long today against Lawson Little and Tony Manero, who won, 7 and 6. Manero and Little led from flagfall to finish with a 65 in the morning and a 34 going out this afternoon.

Tomorrow Manero and Little tangle with Snead and Guldahl, while Smith and Runyan meet Picard and Revolta.

Griffith, Myer Near Settlement On Salary Terms

By a Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 6.—In a hotel room thick with the cigar smoke of their particular brands, Clark Griffith and Buddy Myer failed to agree on the second baseman's salary terms for 1939, but both predicted an amicable settlement tomorrow.

"We're not far apart," said Griffith. "I think we will agree when I talk to Myer in the morning."

Said Myer: "We're not far apart. I think we'll agree when I talk to Mr. Griffith in the morning."

Myer was offered "a very substantial raise" over his 1938 wages, said Griffith. Myer's .336 batting average of last year has presented him with a powerful argument in his salary battle.

Masterson, Alexandra Impress Bucky Harris

Nats' Pilot Well Pleased With Showing of Two Rookies; Sam West and Buddy Myer In Camp and Ready for Work

By a Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 6.—A sandlot kid from Philadelphia and the only Venezuelan ever to get a big league tryout pitched themselves into the esteem of Manager Bucky Harris today in the Nats camp.

The former sandlotter is Walter Masterson, 18-year-old right-hander, who began to improve his fast ball when he gained 16 pounds while eating regularly on the Nats' last Western trip of 1938. The Venezuelan is Alex Alexandra, of uncertain age, but very apparent pitching talents.

Masterson and Alexandra dominated today's pitching show in striking contrast to the big Cuban, Roberto Ortiz, who was having difficulty getting the ball across the plate. The pair visibly impressed Manager Harris, who sent a half dozen rookie hurlers to the mound during the workout.

Harris was on the edge of jubilation as he saw Alexandra, pitching with a poise remarkable for a fellow without experience in organized baseball, get the ball over the plate when he chose to throw either his fast one or curve. The Nats' array of hitters who had feasted on the pitching of the Venezuelan's predecessors, were popping up when they weren't fouling off Alexandra's pitches

Harris "Sold" on Rookie

"I don't know where he learned it, but he knows how to pitch," commented Harris. "If we had to open the season tomorrow, I'd have to name that guy as my pitcher. The hitters may catch up to him after a while, but I'm not so sure about that. His fast one is good enough and from what I've seen of his curve, that will do, too. I hope I'm not dreaming."

But fully as impressive as Alexandra was young Masterson. The month he spent with the Nats last year was obviously helpful to the Philadelphia lad who has become something of a pitching stylist despite his meager experience.

Masterson showed both a speed ball and a let-up ball, and when he chose to throw his fast one, even such hardy hitters as Bobby Estallela and Taft Wright were baffled. It was Masterson's first exhibition of what appears to be all his speed, and Harris is not certain that he will be sent out for seasoning.

The Nats' camp assumed more of a big league atmosphere today when Second Baseman Buddy Myer and Outfielder Sammy West put in their appearance to offset the preponderance of rookies here.

Kentucky Grid Squad Booked By Colonials

G. W. Will Invade Lexington in 1940 For First Game

Max Farrington athletic director at George Washington University, announced yesterday the addition of the University of Kentucky gridders to the Colonials 1940 schedule. The Wildcats will meet in Lexington, Ky., October 19.

The agreement called for a home-and-home series but due to no available dates on the '41 cards of either school, the Southeastern Conference members will not appear here until October 31, 1942.

George Washington has scheduled members of the conference over the past several years but it will be the first athletic relations with the State University.

The opening of grdi relations may also pave the way for a place on the Colonial's court card for Kentucky, one of the finest teams in the South for years.

The game is the seventh on the 1940 card for the G. W. team, and the other including Georgetown, Kansas, West Virginia and Bucknell at home and Kentucky, Washington and Lee and Clemson away. One or more games will be added to open the schedule.

P. G. A. Championship Awarded to Pomonok

Sarasota, Fla., March 6 (AP).—George R. Jacobus, president of the Professional Golfers Association of America, announced today the 1939 P. G. A. championship has been awarded to Pomonok Country Club, Flushing, N. Y.

Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., will be the defending champion.

Skate Stars Will Perform Here Tonight

Over a dozen exhibitions and competitive events are on the program of the District's first figure skating exhibition, sponsored by the Washington Figure Skating Club, tonight at Riverside stadium, starting at 7:30 p. m.

Dorothy Snell, Washington's leading contender for national honors, is one of the featured performers, competing in several of the events.

Future champion of the skating club will open the card, followed by Lois Waring, Ice Club of Baltimore, and Walter Bainbridge, local skater.

Amy Miller, Baltimore, and Nick Arvanis in a relay jump, group numbers and a relay race between the host club and D. C. Employment Center will follow.

Judge W. C. Coleman, president of the Ice Club of Baltimore, and Dr. Christopher Meyer, president, Washington Figure Skating Club, will handle the introduction.

Indians Again Have Player Option Trouble

Rookie Outfielder Petitions Landis Claiming Freedom

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, March 6.—Bill Sodd, rookie outfielder, said today he would petition Baseball Commissioner Landis for freedom from the Cleveland Indians.

Sodd announced he was basing his claim on an alleged violation of the rule forbidding a major league club from optioning a player to a minor league farm more than three times. He said he was signed when he came out of the University of Texas, spent two seasons at the Indians' former farm in Zanesville, Ohio, and two with the Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Club.

Sodd's complaint recalled the Indians' frequent trouble with players seeking to be declared free agents. Two years ago Commissioner Landis ruled Tommy Henrich free from the Indians, and Henrich signed with the New York Yankees.

25 Hoyas Report For Ball Practice

Twenty-five candidates reported for Georgetown's first baseball meeting yesterday. The Hoyas open their season with American University at home, April 4.

There will be no practice for infielders or outfielders until next week. The batterymen, however, will be out for the first time today.

Maj. Ross Elected

Record Broken By Patty Berg In Medal Play

Belleair, Fla., March 6. — Patty Berg, red-haired women's national golf champion, set a new course record here today in the qualifying round for the annual Belleair Invitation tournament, at 38, 38—76, in winning the medal by a 4-stroke margin

Helen Dettweiler, from the Congressional Club in Washington, was well within the qualifying limits of the championship flight with a pair of 42s for an 84. Dorothy Kirby and Jane Cothran trailed Miss Berg with 80s, while Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare was next with 82.

Other qualifiers were Laddie Irwin, 83; Adarion Miley, 85; Ada McKenzie, 86; Jean Bauer, 87; Mrs. Kazel Martelle, 87; Jean Kyer, 87; Mary Agnes Wall, 87; Mrs. Mark McGarry, 88; Frances Hadfield, 88, and Betty Myers, 89.

A penalty stroke on the fifth hole and a pair of missed 4-foot putts ran Miss Dettweiler's score to 42 on the out nine and after a two-over par 6 on the twelfth hole, she rallied with birdies on the fifteenth and seventeenth for a 42 coming back.

Mungo Takes Cut; To Receive $5,000

Clearwater, Fla., March 6.—Van Lingle Mungo, the prima donna pitcher of Brooklyn's daffy Dodgers, signed his much-discussed 1939 contract today, calling for a two-thirds cut to $5,000.

With the signing came the disclosure that baseball's high commissioner, Kenesaw M. Landis, was the arbitrator who brought "the light" to the Peck's bad boy of the Dodgers, after he had tossed the contract back to the club twice.

Miami Beach, Fla., March 6.—I don't know. Maybe there's something to this game of golf after all. Of course, it's easy enough to give the whole business up when there's snow on the ground and ice on the sidewalks. In the winter it seems rather futile. But when the sun is shining overhead and you find yourself in the midst of the cross-country caravan composed of the leading players in the land, which paused here in the winter wanderings for the international four-ball championship, well, you begin to remember some of the good shots.

VIDMER

Walter Hagen swore he had only played six rounds of golf since last fall, but arriving on the scene just in time to participate he required only three tentative swings of his drive in the way of practice and went out to turn in a 68 and then a 69.

"You can't tell me he has played only six rounds," Gene Sarazen said, after watching the Haig's accomplishments. And, as a matter of fact, that's about all Gene did—watch Hagen. He was far off his own game and couldn't help when help was needed, so the two veterans were beaten by Craig Wood and Billy Burke in the first round.

But their defeat did not dim the glory of the way Sir Walter went winging around the course, even though Sarazen was skeptical about his partner's lack of competition. Sam Snead enhanced Sarazen's suspicions, when he revealed that he had run into Hagen on a ferry boat at St. Petersburg last week and the Haig had sworn him not to tell anybody he was in town.

"I want to surprise the boys at Miami," he said. And he sneaked away to some isolated course and spent the day in practice. He surprised them all right, and though eliminated he was bubbling with enthusiasm when he finished.

"Look out," he gurgled in glee. "I'm coming back. I'm going to play at Greenshoro and in the North and South and maybe some of these fellows who buried me four or five years ago will be a little embarrassed. There's one thing I want to do this year above

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Miami, Fla., March 6.

Down here, where summer spends the winter and the moon is a copy off the picture postcards, your correspondent encountered Mr. Will Dinneen, the retired American League umpire. His experience at calling the close ones seemingly is standing him in good stead, because the ponies which have been running at Hialeah are keeping Mr. Dinneen in very good style.

POVICH

In other words, Mr. Dinneen has picked up something here besides a suntan and he will remain throughout the Tropical Park meeting. "The horse is a wonderful animal," said Mr. Dinneen. "In fact, some of my best friends have been horses," he added, displaying a roll of cabbage that would choke one of his best friends.

But essentially Mr. Dinneen is a baseball man, not a horse player, and naturally enough the topic veered to the big leagues of which he was a part for more than 40 years as star pitcher and umpire. If memory serves, he was the Boston Red Sox pitcher who clinched the pennant that October day in 1906 when Jack Chesbro wild-pitched it away for the Yankees in the last game of the season.

Didn't Believe His Eyes

"Did I ever tell you of the day that Cap Huston came into the Yankee ball park?" inquired Dinneen. Inasmuch as Capt. Huston was half-owner of the Yankees with Col. Ruppert and went into the Yankee ball park on a thousand different days, your correspondent demanded to know which day Dinneen had reference to.

"Why, the day Cap walked into Yankee Stadium off a hunting trip and took a seat with Col. Ruppert in his box. Those hunting trips of Huston's, understand, were not entirely hunting trips. He'd gather a few of his friends around him at his Brunswick, Ga., plantation and every once in a while they'd put down their glasses and hunt. Anyway, Huston was fresh off one of those so-called hunting trips this day.

"What he saw at Yankee Stadium made him blink. It was 1923, I think, and for the first time the American League was trying out its system of three umpires for each game. Down in Georgia, Huston apparently hadn't been following the news. Anyway, when he saw one umpire behind the plate, another one near second base and the new third umpire on third base, he rubbed his eyes and began to perspire. He looked again and panic showed on his face. He turned to Col Ruppert.

"'Gawd, I'm glad you said that,' shouted Huston and he heaved a sigh of relief that would have cleared the right-field fence."

Widener-Bradley Feuding

Tops among the show places of Miami is beauteous Hialeah Racetrack and that is what is bothering Col. Edward R. Bradley, who put up most of the dough to set Hialeah in motion. He is the partner of Mr. Joseph G. Widener, the Philadelphia socialite, who is president of the track. But he is by no means a silent partner. Col. Bradley is squawking and the other day in the clubhouse he pointed a warning finger at Mr. Widener and called him names.

What Col. Bradley has been objecting to is the fact that Hialeah, despite its tremendously successful meetings in late years, is not showing much of a profit. It is not showing much of a profit because Mr. Widener insists on pouring the profits back into the beautification of his dream-child. Row upon row of bouganvillae have been newly created, the stately palms are curried by crews of workers with all the care of manicurists working on Her Majesty's cuticle and clunkies in uniform litter the place.

Fifty-One Per Cent

Mr. Bradley does not care for all this show and the failure to reap the profits of Hialeah offends his sense of commerce. He wants to see some returns on his investment and he would pull out of Hialeah if he could. But he refuses to sell his stock to Mr. Widener. He is rueing the day that he permitted Mr. Widener to buy 51 per cent of the stock in the Miami Jockey Club.

It was the colonel's money that rescued Hialeah only a few years ago and he is still powerful enough in the stockholders' meeting to insist on filling the position of secretary-treasurer of the track with a man of his own choosing. When the secretary-treasurer died last year, Bradley imported his own man from his Lexington, Ky., farm for the job. It is his only check on Widener. But if Hialeah becomes any more beautiful there is certain to be a showdown between the colonel and Mr. Widener.

On the Line With Considine

New York, March 6.—In 1931 Babe Ruth was making $80,000 a year and Tom Dewey was a struggling young lawyer. Twenty Grand won the Derby that year in record-breaking time, 2:01 4-5, and they were still talking about the way Grover Cleveland Alexander was holding up. The Green Bay Packers won the professional football championship that year, nosing out Portsmouth, Providence, Stapleton and other such teams. That was the year Pepper Martin ran wild against Connie Mack's team in the world series and the Yankee had a new manager named Joe McCarthy on trial.

CONSIDINE

In fact, 1931 was the year Tony Canzoneri, the seasoned lightweight champion, beat Jackie Kid Berg twice.

Top Flight won $219,000 in 1931, an all-time high for a 2-year-old. Knute Rockne doubted whether the Irish eleven would have another year like '30. Tilden turned pro in 1931 after winning the last of his world amateur championships the previous fall. Ty Cobb, not long out of baseball, decided to live in California. Johnny Weismueller got a job with a bathing suit company and gave up the amateur game. Bobby Jones retired from amateur golf at his peak. Joseph Barrow was a scholar in a Detroit school for backward children.

Time flies. Ruth is a fat and often-disgruntled old boy who believes baseball gave him a shabby deal. Tom Dewey is the most-discussed man in the country, outside of Roosevelt. Twenty Grand is awaybellied and in retirement, with no hope of ever sireing foals. Alexander's in a flea circus, and teams like Portsmouth, Providence and Stapleton are gone forever from the pro league. Pepper Martin is reported having trouble holding his job with the Cards.

Top Flight is a matron. Rockne was killed in March of '31 in a plane crash. Tilden is broke and living in London. Cobb is old and regretful and reactionary. Weismueller is acting in the movies. A new generation of pros have made the public forget Jones, and Joseph Barrow became Joe Louis, the man who brought back the million-dollar gate.

Canzoneri? Berg?

Dr. John Bain Sutherland, the austere dentist who has run the University of Pittsburgh's football teams for years, pulled a pretty sensible trick in handing in his resignation at this—the launching of Pitt's holier-than-thou policy. If he had stayed, and attempted to play that back-breaking schedule with only the gang of students the authorities now want him to use, he would have been fired as an incompetent in a couple of years.

He quits Pitt as the top man of American coaches. Give him the standard quota of athletic schblarships, spending money for his players, and a scout or two to beat through the bushes in search of unshod history scholars, and the man is next to unbeatable. Take those things away from him and he (and any other coach who ever lived) couldn't compete against coaches who possess those several aids. He was smart to quit, for now Pittsburgh won't be able to salve its salty conscience by eventually discharging him—for rigidly adhering to the new-styled athletic honesty which the Pitt athletic office so long abhorred.

Favored Teams Win as Post-A. A. U. Play Opens

Dapper Dans Five Beats Fort Hunt

Stewart, St. Martin's Also Victorious in Basketball Title Games Before 1,000

Four favored quintets, with only one extended after the first few minutes of play, advanced to the second round of play in three classes as The Washington Post-A. A. U. court tournament was off to a successful start last night in Eastern High gymnasium.

Over 1,000 fans witnessed the program, and saw Stewart Brothers Photographers extended by Jewish C. C. in the opening 135-pound class game finally winning, 21-15, and then St. Martin's in the 145 and United-Dapper Dan and Interior in the unlimited followed with impressive opening triumphs.

A. Earle Weeks, president of the District A. A. U., tossed the first ball and opened the event for 105 teams in quest of Washington Post trophies and A. A. U. medals. Play will be continued on Wednesday.

St. Martin's margin over Police Boys Club in the 145-pound class was 55-22, while United Typewriter-Dapper Dan thumped Fort Hunt CCC, 65-33, and Interior more than doubled the score on GAO, 44-21.

United-Dapper Dans Trim Fort Hunt

United Typewriter-Dapper Dans, with a star-studded line-up of former high school and college luminaries, defeated a game but outclassed Fort Hunt CCC five, 65-33, in the first unlimited tilt of the tourney.

Led by Bill Noonan, who accounted for 20 points, and Ollie Tipton, whose 17 point allotment included four pot-shots from midcourt, the United Typos built up a 38-15 lead at halftime and continued to add to the margin throughout the final half.

Waranzaak led the attack of the CCC boys with six field goals for 12 points, while Newman and Abbott were outstanding for the losers with all-round play.

St. Martin's Five Routs Police B. C.

St. Martin's, first victor in the 145-pound class, immediately became one of the favored quintets with an impressive 55-22 triumph over Police Boys Club. They lost one of their most dependable players in the early minutes of the game in Bob Quigley, who was believed to have suffered a broken nose. He may be back for their second round contest.

With a pair of forwards and the regular guards leading the scoring by dividing 45 points, the eventual winners took a 25-10 lead at halftime and were never extended.

Andy Farrell's 13 points topped the attack, with Vince McNally and Tom Hanley accounting for 12 each and Bud Larrick 10. Ray Battaglini, with 13 points and a fine floor game, paced the losers.

Stewart Photo Five Defeats J. C. C.

Jewish Community Center's 135-pound contenders started with a rush and threw a scare into Stewart Photographers Five, undefeated in two years, before the latter rallied in the last half for a 21-15 victory.

With a well-divided scoring attack, the J. C. C. quintet assumed a 13-8 advantage at half time and it looked like an upset in the very first game of the tournament. But Cecil Darden hit a scoring spree in the last half and almost personally tied the score at 15-all. Bob Saffron sent Stewart's ahead at 17-15 and then went on to win by six points.

Saffron's eight points and Darden's seven led the scorers, while the losers, scoreless from the floor in the second half, were paced by Tobin with a field goal and four fouls for six points.

Eastern Digs Out to Beat Alexandria

D. C. School Champs Overcome 15-Point Lead; St. John's Wins

With one of the wildest and most irresistible second-half scoring sprees the season has seen, Eastern High basketball champion of Washington's public schools, survived the first round of the Metropolitan Schoolboy Tournament last night at Tech. It dug itself out of a 15-point deficit at the half and buried George Washington High, of Alexandria, under a 42-32 score.

In the opening half of the double-header, St. John's, defending city-wide titlist, opened all valves to issue a blistering 33-9 defeat to an inexperienced five from Jefferson High, Fairfax, Va. It was the first tournament start ever made by the Virginia lads, though they boast a string of 14 straight victories in county play this year.

Eastern's astounding victory it owed almost entirely to a pair of lanky, but eagle-eyed shooters, Lenny Mills and Bob Custer. The pair combined to put the White Tide back in the game after it sagged to a sad 25-10 disadvantage at the half, and inspired the rest of the team as it continued to roll into a 10-point victory. Custer scored only 2 points in the first half, but added 14 more in the second for a 16-point total. Mills had 5 points at intermission, and registered 10 more before the game was over.

Tonight's schedule for the Metropolitan Tournament, sponsored by the Evening Star, will be Tech against Mount Rainier at 7:30 p. m. and Gonzaga against Montgomery Blair at 8:45 p. m.

Odd Fellows' Pinmen Led by Perce Ellett

360 Set Boosts Mark; Gatewood Rolls 160 Game in Sanico Loop

Perce Ellett, Washington Duckpin Association president, took over the high average position in the Odd Fellows League at Brookland last night with a 360 set that boosted his mark to 114-19 for the season. Frank Luckett had high game of 150.

Brightwood won its ninth straight game to pull within a game of the leading Columbia No. 1 quintet, that dropped one out of three to Friendship.

Army Medicos to Make Debut In Post Tourney Tomorrow

Soldiers Play Georgetown Students; Columbia Beverage Due for Action

A well-balanced program of four games will be offered Washington basketball fans tomorrow night in the District A. A. U. championship tournament, being sponsored by The Washington Post at the Eastern High School Gymnasium, Seventeenth and East Capitol streets.

Two unlimited class games, one in the 145-pound division and another in the 120-pound race will provide the action that should keep the ball humming, starting at 7 p. m.

The Columbia Beverage Co. five, winners of the 145-pound championship last year, hope to escape elimination in a clash with the Prince Georges County Police Boys Club No. 2. Two other games involve Washington Police Club teams. The 120-pounders meet the Greenbelt Shamrocks in the opening battle at 7 o'clock while an hour later the unlimited Police Boys Club five tackles the Railroad Retirement Board Club, now operating in the Community Center League.

The other game on the card should provide plenty of excitement. The Army Medicos, who have been playing a mighty good brand of basketball in the U. S. Government League as well as in Army circles, will face a test right off the bat in the Georgetown University intermural team. The Hoyas five has been winning regularly this season and numbers among its players men who starred in football and golf at the Hilltop this year.

The basketball committee found it necessary to postpone the scheduled meeting of the Greenbelt and McLean fives originally scheduled for tomorrow. However, this game has been included on Friday's program and the rival Maryland and Virginia clubs should give the fans plenty of action.

Friday's schedule also brings the first girls' clash of the tournament and will mark the appearance of the famed Rockville Girls, undefeated in two years and the 1938 champions of the District A. A. U.

The Rockville Girls will tackle the fair representatives of the Rural Electrification Administration who will be determined to end the winning streak of their opponents. If REA can down Rockville, those who have followed the girls this season maintain that they will be well on the road to the title.

Delaware and Hudson, prominent in the Heurich League and the favorite among most independent and league fans to carry off the title in the unlimited class, will face the Georgetown Boys Club unlimited five at 10 o'clock on Friday's program. The fourth game will find the Central Branch Boys Club fighting it out with the Powell Community Center Boys Club in a 135-pound class game that opens the card at 7 o'clock.

Admission to all programs is 25 cents.

On Fishing

The hearing before the House Fish and Game Committee on H. B. 242, which is the bill for the prevention of the sale of Black Bass in Maryland is set for 3 p. m. Thursday. If you are one of the many approving its passage, by all means lend your support by your presence at the State House, in Annapolis, at that time.

ACKERMAN

It is said, several members of this committee are holding up a favorable report—Dashiell, of Dorchester County; Fairbanks, of Talbot, and Hurley, of Somerset. Why, is more of a conundrum than we can answer, for since surrounding States made bootlegging of the catch necessary if it was to be sold over the State line, catches have dropped materially.

According to the latest records of the United States Bureau of Fisheries, Baltimore County showed only 600 pounds sold at $70, while the preceding year there was 7,800 pounds taken with a value of $711. In Cecil County, in 1936, the catch was 36,200 pounds as against 31,400 in 1937. In Charles County 5,500 pounds in 1936, which in 1937 dropped to 1,500 ounds, while Harford reported 7,900 pounds in 1936 and only 4,900 the following year. The catch and sale in other counties is inconsequential. None were reported taken and sold in 1937 from Talbot, Somerset, Wicomici, Worcester, Calvert, Queen Annes and St. Marys.

Waltonians will note that the meeting Wednesday evening of the Washington Chapter will be at the Mayflower Hotel instead of at the Department of Commerce Aquarium. There will in all probability be a report on the work accomplished by the waterchestnut eradication committee, which under the direction of Judge William S. Snow, of Alexandria, has made real progress toward the removal of this menace to our bass fishing and fall shooting. Army engineers have begun a study, and as soon as the investigation is completed and the report made, it is hoped they will take over the direction of the eradication.

In the meantime, from a chart of all affected areas, the CCC camps in that section will be assigned to some of this work, when the projects for this summer's work are allotted on April 1.

The conservation setup for Maryland has not been changed in any way by the appointment of a three-member commission to take the place of the present commission which was appointed by former Gov. Harry Nice, for should the Bowman conservation bill calling for a seven-member nonsalaried commission be passed by the present Legislature, then it should only be necessary to name an additional four members.

There is considerable activity in Maryland regarding the model conservation bills proposed for the State. Gov. Herbert O'Conor is asking for the expression of the views of the various interested organizations in every section. Senators and Delegates are doing the same, so there is every indication that something constructive will be accomplished at this session of the Legislature.

The present new commission is made up of former member of the House of Delegates William H. Labrot as the southern Maryland representative! Robert A. Harrison, Talbot County oyster packer, as representative of the Eastern Shore, and Edwin Warfield, of Howard County, is regarded as representative of western Maryland, and chairman.

Steve Mamakos Takes Decision In Fight Here

Defeats Pimpanelli In Hard Battle; 1,500 Attend Bouts

By Lewis F. Atchison.

The cast-iron jaw and boiler-plate midriff of Steve Mamakos proved too formidable a barrier for the sharp punching of clever Vincent Pimpanelli last night, and the durable Greek chalked up a unanimous 10-round decision over the New York Italian at Turner's Arena.

An audience of 1,500 fans saw Pimpanelli tire badly after hitting Steve with everything in his extensive repertoire in the first round, and finish a poor second. It was all Mamakos after that. Pimpanelli rallied briefly in the closing rounds—holding the Washington welterweight even in the seventh, but Mamakos' boring-in tactics and inexhaustible reservoir of energy was the deciding factor.

A Tough Battle

Mamakos, however, knew he was in a battle. Pimpanelli rocked him with a right to the jaw in the first round after catching him in a neutral corner. Later he almost ripped off his nose with another right uppercut. He darkened Steve's left eye with another round-house swipe, but still couldn't feaze him.

The Greek took command in the second round, pumping an unending stream of leather to Pimpanelli's head and kidney. Moving in with head down and both arms flailing away, he sapped the Italian's energy and destroyed his confidence.

Pimpanelli fought fitfully throughout the engagement, opening up with brief spurts that never failed to find the target but inflicted no lasting damage. Every time he tried to slug it out Mamakos made him quit—made him clinch and hold for a brief respite.

Mamakos' Eye Is Cut

In the fourth, fifth, seventh and ninth rounds Pimpanelli speared Steve with crisp rights to the head, once lifting him off the floor with a left that found a perfect target. In the eighth, he opened a thin gash over Mamakos' left eye, and the optic oozed blood profusedly in the remaining minutes.

Billy Banks (132) scored a unanimous decision over Peppy Brown (129) in another four-rounder.

Augie Kroll (127) floored Joe Sole (125½) twice in the last of a four-round fight to win a unanimous decision. It was a brisk and clever battle from the outset.

Ben Cohen (153½) won an unpopular four-round decision over Bobby Rube (152½). The victory avenged a knockout Cohen suffered at Rube's hands the previous week.

Frankie Wills (142½) reversed a previous defeat at Bob Wilson's hands in taking a split decision in the six-round semifinal. Wilson (146½) was unable to use his vaunted left hook effectively, as Wills continually clinched throughout the fight.

That's a pretty good idea limiting foreign nations to $5,000,000 loans. We've thrown out bread on the waters and all we ever got back was the sauce.

"We've been running a cash and carry store for a long time. If you haven't any cash we will carry you.

The Brighter Side . . .

By Damon Runyon

We have been enjoying our annual case of the flu and the other night, probably under the influence of a slight fever, we had a dream about the Kentucky Derby.

RUNYON

In this dream, we saw a muddy track at Churchill Downs, and out of a cloud of goo raised by the flying hooves of the horses in the stretch run, we saw Challedon suddenly emerge to win the big race by a length from a horse that we think was Technician, with El Chico third.

Now that just shows you what a fever will do for a fellow. The dream was so vivid that we awoke to find we were giving a pillow a terrific handride and Horsethief Burke, who was sitting up with us, says we were crying aloud, "Let me through." We must have been talking to the other jockeys in the race.

The dream made such an impression on us that we called up Shaumus Dobkin, the bookmaker, out in Chicago and asked what he was laying against Challedon for the Derby. It was around 3 o'clock in the morning and Shaumus seemed a little irked at being disturbed at such an hour.

"Challedon?" he said. "Is that a horse?"

We said there was no doubt of it.

"Well, without even looking him up, you can have 20, 10 and 4," Shaumus replied. "Wasn't you talking about Yale O' Nine the last time I heard from you?"

"Yes," we said, "but he didn't appear in a dream we just had."

"If you're playing 'em on dreams now, I'm going to give you 30, 15 and 6 on Challedon," replied Shaumus.

Well, of course it is not advisable to play the Kentucky Derby on dreams. Probably it is not really advisable to play it on anything. You know the old gag about the magnanimous tout saying to the sucker:

"Do you want a sure tip on this next race?"

"Yes," said the sucker, eagerly.

"Keep your money in your pocket," said the tout.

We suppose that is the only dead sure tip on the Kentucky Derby, too, but think how mad we would be if we disregarded the dream and down popped Challedon at Louisville in May!

In offering us 10 to 1 that Challedon does not start in the Derby, Shaumus Dobkin was just quoting the odds on that proposition this far off the race. We think it was Col. Edward Riley Bradley, winner of four derbies, who first said one winter that it was about that price that no one could name a sure starter in the May race.

The colonel had in mind the uncertainties of the racing game and the vicissitudes that beset race horses. Anyway, his quotation is now practically standard. Speaking of Col. Bradley, he is hoping to knock off his fifth Derby this year with a horse named Benefactor. He looks so good the colonel withdrew him from win-

Dunade Captures Inaugural Feature at Tropical Park

Sun Inplay Beaten Out By a Head

Winner Pays $6.70 For $2; Knight Gallant Shows; Crowd Of 10,000 Attends

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., March 6.—The last lap of Florida's 96-day racing season began here this afternoon with a colorful crowd, estimated at 10,000, cramming the Gables Racing Association's pretty little course for the inaugural program of a 30-day session. Topping the sport was the Pan-American Purse, a 6-furlong dash that attracted a half-dozen seasoned veterans to the post.

In a stirring finish, Dunade, from the Fanfare Farms, outlasted K. A. Veit's Sun Inplay by a head to earn the major portion of the $1,200 purse. Four lengths behind came the favored Knight Gallant, representing B. Lewin, to annex the show. Co-Sport, Irish Moon and Lady Infinite brought up the remainder of the field.

Dunade and Sun Inplay drew almost as much support as Knight Gallant. The victor returned $6.70 for $2 and stepped the distance in 1:11 3-5 under Apprentice Jimmy Ashcroft.

This was the eighth straight race in which Dunade finished in the money. He broke fifth in a good start. Sun Inplay the rail horse, went out to set the pace under Don Meade, with Dunade hustled right after him. Meade, a sensation at the Hialeah meeting, urged Sun Inplay into a length and a half lead leaving the backstretch, but Ashcroft, one of the most promising apprentices seen here this winter, had plenty of horse under him and waited to strike.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TUTTICURIO, $15.40, $11.00, $6.20; FAIR, $22.10, $9.90; MUGGINS, $3.90.

TUTTICURIO, away fast, went in near pursuit of the leaders while racing on the outside in the early running. He responded gamely to vigorous urging through the stretch to win going away. FAIR showed good speed and raced MUGGINS into defeat the first half mile. She drew out on the stretch turn, but then faltered in the final drive. MUGGINS, in close attendance of the pace throughout, took a brief lead rounding the turn, but then faltered in the final furlong yet outlasted OUR DAVID. The latter, well upon the inside, was unable to obtain clear passage in the stretch run. FRANCO SAXON was under extreme pressure all the way. BUTTER, vigorously ridden, closed some ground, but never threatened.

SECOND RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 2:30. Off at 2:30½. Winner, Arcturus Stable's blk. h. (9), by High Time—Mary Belle. Trained by J. P. Smith. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:22 4-5, 0:46, 1:06 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ISAIAH, $3.80, $2.90, $2.50; SAUNDERSTOWN, $3.40, $2.90; PATSEY BEGONE, $2.90.

ISAIAH, away forwardly, was hustled to the front in the opening furlong, set a steady pace and held away the remainder of the journey. SAUNDERSTOWN broke well, but was pinched back going down the backstretch. He gained gradually under strong pressure and outlasted PATSEY BEGONE in the final drive. PATSEY BEGONE moved up strongly while circling the field rounding the turn, but drifted out entering the stretch, which cost her second place. CRIMEA went prominently in the early stages, but faltered in the stretch run.

Daily Double, Tutticurio and Isaiah, Paid $46.50.

THIRD RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $800. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start good. Won cleverly; place driving. Went to post at 2:58. Off at 3:00½. Winner, King Ranch's b. c. (2), by Boojum—Chicaros Hallie. Two-dollar mutuels paid—UNICO, $12.20, $5.30, $3.80; BAGGRAVE, $3.30, $2.90; MARANDAN, $4.70.

UNICO, away forwardly, followed the leaders well up rounding the turn. He moved up with determination between the leaders at the furlong pole and drew out through the stretch. BAGGRAVE broke well, took a shlight lead in the early running while saving ground, but was not equal to the winner in the final furlong. MARANDAN broke well, went forwardly the entire trip. MOUNTALOON broke alertly, went in close attendance of the pace for 3 furlongs and then faltered. DARBY DALLAS broke well, but was crowded out of contention immediately. He closed a big gap when clear.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds; allowances. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 3:26. Off at 3:30½. Winner, W. C. Stroube's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SIRASIA, $4.30, $3.20, $2.70; SHOHOLA, $3.70, $3.40; SCOTCH TRAP, $4.00.

SIRASIA broke toward the outside. He was slow to settle into stride until approaching the half-mile pole. He gained steadily on the outside thereafter to wear the leaders down through the stretch and win going away. SHOHOLA held the field safe for speed and, rated in front while saving ground, held on gamely to outlast SCOTCH TRAP. The latter, a keen contender all the way, finished gamely to punishment and would have been second in a few more strides. BROWN BEN and BLUE FANG finished stoutly.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. For 4-year-olyds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:57. Off at 3:58½. Winner, Fanfare Farm's b. or br. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RUNADE, $6.70, $3.60, $2.80; SUN INFLAY, $4.10, $2.80; KNIGHT GALLANT, $2.50.

DUNADE, a keen contender on the outside of the leader from the start, finished gamely when the final test came and outlasted SUN INFLAY. The latter, vigorously urged in the run out of the chute, took a short lead while saving ground in the early running. He made a game effort when challenged, but could not stave off the winner's bid. KNIGHT GALLANT, rushed back shortly after the start, moved into contention while circling the field rounding the turn, but lost ground turning into the stretch and just lasted enough to stave off CO-SPORT'S bid. The latter and IRISH MOON finished well.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:26. Off at 4:29. Winner, A. E. Munyer's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLYING CAR, $25.20, $11.30, $6.50; HOLIDAY TEA, $4.90, $4.00; BUCK BENNY, $17.50.

FLYING CAR broke alertly, forced a steady pace and raced PARKING TICKET into defeat rounding the turn. She drew out at the furlong pole, but had to be ridden out vigorously to withstand HOLIDAY TEA'S challenge. The latter, saving ground and going well up all the way, suffered repeated minor interference and may have won with clear passage. BUCK BENNY, quickest to begin, went forwardly on the outside and outlasted CREAM CHEESE in the final drive.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:56. Off at 5:01. Winner, Mrs. Durkin's ch. g. (5), by Reigh Count—French Duchess. Trained by J. Webber. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:49, 1:14, 1:40 3-5, 1:47.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—COUNT MAURICE, $15.20, $6.50, $4.80; SHINING SUN, $7.40, $5.10; KNIGHT WARRIOR, $4.20.

COUNT MAURICE, unruly at the post, broke forwardly, followed the pace closely under light restraint while saving ground, took command entering the stretch and won going away. SHINING SUN, saving much ground all the way, closed well under punishment and disposed of the others in the last furlong. KNIGHT WARRIOR, compelled to race wide, finished gamely through the stretch and wore DULCIMER down in the final strides. DULCIMER, quickest to get going, showed good speed, but faltered in the stretch run. FIRST ENTRY lacked speed and ran a very dull race.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles; purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:30. Off at 5:32. Winner, Mrs. E. Haughton's blk. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BEAVER COUNTY, $15.20, $5.90, $4.40; STALAGMITE, $4.60, $3.40; BONNY CLABBER, $4.20.

BEAVER COUNTY gradually bettered his position on the outside in the final 3 furlongs and wore STALAGMITE down in the final drive. STALAGMITE, going forwardly on the outside under light restraint, moved up and took command entering the stretch, but then faltered when challenged. BONNY CLABBER, rushed around the leaders leaving the backstretch, raced BALLYSTRATFORD into defeat, took a short lead entering the stretch, but then faltered. ASSIST finished in game fashion.

A. I. B. Plans Banking Talks Before Schools

Functions of Banks To Be Explained To Younger Groups

By Thomas M. Cahill.

A program to promote better understanding of banking among younger people has been arranged by Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, with Stuart S. Ogilvie, assistant cashier of Second National Bank, heading the chapter's public education committee to carry out this work. Purpose of this group is to present talks pertaining to functions and activities of banks before students of grammar and high schools and colleges.

Last year, addresses given at various schools in and near Washington were received with enthusiasm and a longer and more comprehensive schedule has been outlined for this year. Work of this committee is of great importance as one of the major problems of banks today is the necessity of properly educating the public with regard to the functions of banking institutions.

The following are assisting Mr. Oglivie in the instructional work: Richard A. Norris, vice president, Lincoln National Bank; Horace F. Stokes, cashier, Metropolitan Bank; Norman E. Towson, assistant treasurer, Washington Loan & Trust Co.; Hans W. Ireland, assistant treasurer, American Security & Trust Co.; Wallace Schreiner, First National Bank, Alexandria, and Roland Carr, Riggs National Bank.

Work of this committee is in conjunction with that of the Public Education Commission of the American Bankers Association, the speakers unit of the District of Columbia Bankers Association and the National Public Education Committee of the American Institute of Banking. Mr. Schreiner has already made two talks dealing with "Commercial Banking," on behalf of the committee, at George Washington High School, in Alexandria.

Building Congress

Addressing the monthly luncheon meeting of Washington Building Congress yesterday at the Lafayette Hotel on "Housing—For Sale and For Rent," Bruce A. Wilson, marketing director, Structural Clay Products Institute, expressed opinion that the greatest social dividend in housing will come on the basis of private invested capital for which, of course, there must be adequate income and sufficient profit.

His second point was that reforms, whether they be housing or otherwise, do not come overnight, and neither are the conditions which bring about the need for reforms established that quickly. Housing problems and conditions of today in the District of Columbia are caused by obsolescence, wear and advancement of product and technique in the construction industry, he explained, adding it is to be remembered that the existing "problem house" was built in ac-

Studebaker to Enter Low-Priced Auto Field

South Bend, Ind., March 6 (AP).—President Paul G. Hoffman announced today that the Studebaker Corporation plans to enter the low-priced automobile field.

The new car, Hoffman said, has been developed after four years of research and investment of almost $4,000,000, of which $1,000,000 was for engineering and $1,300,000 for new machinery. Public display of the new model is not expected for at least a month, Hoffman said, but a special preview for South Bend citizens is planned for next Sunday.

Business Loans Gain for Third Week

By the Associated Press.

Business loans of banks increased for the third consecutive week in the seven days ended March 1.

Banks in 101 leading cities reported last night that their commercial, industrial and agricultural loans increased $7,000,000 to a total of $3,773,000,000 in that week. For the three weeks, the increase amounted to $28,000,000, but large decreases were the rule in preceding weeks.

1938 Sales Drop Exceeded Decline In Inventories

New York, March 6 (AP).—Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported today that returns received from 10,000 concerns indicated that in every field—manufacturing, wholesaling and retailing—sales declined more rapidly than inventories during 1938.

The agency gave its preliminary opinion that the summary might be more optimistic than the returns indicated, however, because "questionnaires are always answered more willingly by the man who has relatively good things to report."

Compared with the previous year, the summary said, total dollar sales of manufacturers were off 12 per cent, wholesalers off 10 per cent, and retailers off 8 per cent.

The concern estimated that actually, manufacturers' 1938 total sales were $51,604,000,000, or off 15 per cent, wholesalers, $20,144,000,000, off 13 per cent, and retailers, $35,593,00,000, off 11 per cent.

Peoples Drug Sales Advance in February

Sales of Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., in February, totaled $1,737,147.47, in comparison with $1,658,153.26 in February, 1938, an increase of $78,994.21, or 4.76 per cent, it was announced at the head office here today.

Sales in the first two months of the present year amounted to $3,510,367.74 against $3,404,288.09 in January and February of last year, a gain of $106,079.65, or 3.11 per cent.

Peoples Drug Sales in January totaled $2,475,792.79, which was an increase of $48,801.56 over January, 1938, or 2.01 per cent. The February percentage upturn was well ahead of January.

Nickel, N.J.S.O. Top Investing Trust Holdings

Sears, Roebuck Next Followed by General Electric, Kennecott

New York, March 6.—Analysis by Frazier Jelke & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange, of year-end portfolios of 78 management investment trusts with total resources of over $1,400,000,000 reveals that these institutional investors were large purchasers of securities in 1938, particularly in the last nine months, and closed the year in rather heavily invested positions. Holdings in cash were the smallest since 1936, declining more than 35 per cent last year to about $82,476,000, compared with $128,260,000 a year earlier and $101,860,000 at the end of 1936.

Gauged by the number of trusts holding individual issues, 1938 witnessed many significant changes in the popularity of common stocks. International Nickel, tied with Standard Oil of New Jersey (which moved up from third place), was one of the two most favored issues for the second consecutive year. Sears, Roebuck moved up from twelfth to third place, General Electric from eighth to fourth position, while Texas Corporation dropped from second to tenth position, and International Harvester from fifth to last place in the select group. Probably the most striking change, however, was the return of General Motors to the fold of investment favorites. Anaconda and Socony Vacuum dropped out of the group of most popular shares. Only American Gas & Electric has appeared among the 15 most favored stocks in each of the last seven years.

Advance as Favorites

Among the individual issues which gained greater popularity last year, as compared with 1937, were American Gas & Electric, American Radiator, Borg-Warner, Chesapeake & Ohio, Chrysler, Commercial Credit, Electric Auto Lite, General Electric, General Motors, Goodyear, Holland Furnace, Homestake, North American, Philip Morris, Phillips Petroleum, Pullman, Sears Roebuck, Twentieth Century-Fox, United Aircraft, U. S. Gypsum, U. S. Rubber and F. W. Woolworth.

Stocks which lost popularity last year included Allied Chemical, Anaconda, Atchison, Baltimore & Ohio, Deere, International Harvester, National Supply, New York Central, Socony, Southern Pacific, Texas Corporation and Youngstown Sheet & Tube.

The Market

A Special Correspondent.

Prices Yield as Buying Interest Lags; Traders Fear U. S. Spending Will Go On; Treasury Bonds Firm; Exchange Higher

New York, March 6.—New signs from Washington that New Dealers are clinging grimly to the idea that large-scale Government spending will eventually bring business recovery, contributed to relaxation of buying interest in equities today. In addition, there were some disappointing barometric movements, including an unexpected drop in steel production. Stocks made a show of strength at the start but withered on scattered realizing and puny purchases, steels showing the largest losses. Railroad, motor, carrier equipment and copper descriptions were shaded substantially and aircrafts were soft but other sections held fairly well chiefly because pressure was light. The composite for the 100 leading big board stocks ended 0.30 point lower.

Foreign exchanges were mostly firm against the dollar with the exception of guilders, which slipped a little lower once more.

Caution Rules Buying

Brokerage house opinion before the opening of the market favored a resumption of the uptrend which predominated throughout the last week. It appeared, however, that while some new customers have been attracted to Wall Street, caution rules buying in view of the number of uncertainties. Last week there appeared to be a general feeling that the President and his spending advocates would capitulate to the economy bloc in Congress and to public opinion demanding retrenchment. This week the view is shaken not only by New Deal insistency on continuation of the "buy recovery" theory, but by realization that the controversy between a sharply divided Congress is likely to render the current session less able to supply needed business encouragement.

Low-Priced Shares Favorites

In line with tendencies since January 1, volume showed shrinkage as quotations on stocks dropped and leadership was relinquished by old favorites to low-priced shares. Radio Corporation topped the list with turnover of 26,400 at no change in price. Columbia Gas & Electric, Curtiss-Wright, Loft, Speigel, Engineers Public Service and North American Aviation were other low-priced stocks in the most active division. While 52 of the 779 issues traded made new highs for the year or longer, virtually all lost early gains and a bit more before the end of the session when prices were near the worst levels of the day.

Johns-Manville gained half a point and other building shares found support on private estimates that new housing for the first quarter will show an increase of 75 per cent over the like 1938 period. Allied Chemical, up 2½, was another strong spot. Issues which gave up a point or more included Bethlehem Steel, du Pont, International Harvester, Loew's, Southern Railway, United States Steel and Westinghouse Electric.

Most Treasury Bonds Gain

With the stock market inclined to weakness, corporate bonds lost some of their vigor in today's dealings. But interest quickened perceptibility in the Government bond department on the news of the details of the exchange offering and there was a great deal of shifting about from one issue to another. Strength was the general rule in the Government department, but two issues fell rather sharply.

The weak spots in the Government list were the June notes, for which an exchange offer was made, and the 2¾ per cent bonds of 1965-1960, which were treated best in the offering. The rights slumped 13-32 point and the long bonds were off 6-32. In between these maturities Governments were firm, with the gains in the case of the notes quite sharp. The 1942 note issues rose 3-32 to 7-32 and the 1943 issues were up from 12-32 to 14-32.

Though the value of rights was considerably reduced by the terms of the Treasury offering today, the rights beyond the June issue were but little changed. It was apparent that the market felt that the Treasury might not be in a position to drive such a hard bargain when it offers securities for cash next time. The Government agency issues also were in good demand.

The index of 30 corporate bonds declined .04 on the day. Some of the rail issues, to which investors and speculators have been turning lately, extended their gains by a point or so.

Wheat Prices Decline With Drop Abroad

Closings ½ Cent Off Foreign Demand Light Large Stocks Afloat

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 6.—Quiet but persistent selling of wheat prompted by lower quotations abroad caused fresh declines of as much as ½ cent in values here today.

Poor demands from importing countries, with shipments of exporters and wheat stocks afloat larger, had a depressing effect on prices at Liverpool and thus indirectly exerted pressure on the Chicago market. Unwillingness of trade and public speculative interests to enter the market because of many uncertain factors affecting the price of grains kept volume small.

An early price dip of ⅜ cent was wiped out later but increased selling resulted in fresh declines with the market closing at the day's low, ⅛ to ½ cent below Saturday's finish, May 68½-⅝, and July 68⅝. Corn finished unchanged to ¼ lower, May 49¼-¾, July 50½, oats ⅛-⅜ off, rye ⅛-¼ down; lard 10-15 lower.

Bank Offers Presidency To University Head

San Francisco, March 6 (AP).—Officials of the Anglo California National Bank confirmed reports today that Dr. Robert Gordon Sproul, president of the University of California, had been offered the presidency of the bank, to succeed Herbert Fleshacker, who resigned last October.

The bank announcement said Dr. Sproul probably would "consider the offer some little time before making up his mind."

Wolworth Sales 3.15% Over Year Ago

New York, March 6 (AP).—F. W. Woolworth Co. reports that February sales amounted to $20,685,910, an increase of 3.15 per cent over sales of $20,054,451 in the comparable month in 1938.

McCrory Stores Corporation reported sales in February totaled $2,737,905, an increase of 3.6 per cent over February, 1938, sales of $2,640,833.

Radio Prices

New York, March 6.—The average price of radio sets in 1938 was 73 per cent below the average 1929 price and radio tubes 50 per cent lower, David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation of America, estimates from reports in the trade.

Failures Decline

New York, March 6 (AP).—Business failures in the United States during the week ended March 2 dropped to 214, the lowest for any week since December 1, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. The previous week's total was 217 and a year ago 260.

Steel Estimate Lower for Week

New York, March 6 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week will decline .7 point to 55.1 per cent of capacity, compared with 55.8 per cent in the preceding week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago operations were at the rate of 53.4 per cent of capacity, while a year ago they were 29.9 per cent.

Retail Advertising Moves Above Year Ago

Chicago, March 6.—During the week ended February 18, merchants in 79 leading cities placed a total of 17,938,750 lines of advertising in the newspapers of those cities, an increase of 318,906 lines or 1.8 per cent over the corresponding week of 1938, Advertising Age reported today.

For the first seven weeks of 1939, however, retail newspaper advertising in reporting cities was slightly below 1938 levels, the publication said.

Employment Drops 1.5% in January

New York, March 6 (AP).—The National Industrial Conference Board, a research organization supported by corporations, reported today that employment in the United States declined 1.5 per cent in January, compared with December, bringing the total of the Nation's employed workers to 43,667,000.

At the same time, because of the availability of new potential workers, unemployment increased 7.4 per cent from 9,913,000 in December to 10,645,000 in January. The board's unemployed figure includes 3,311,000 workers in the Federal emergency labor projects.

Cotton Futures Continue Rise

New York, March 6 (AP).—Well sustained buying by the trade and foreign interests pushed the cotton futures market up 5 to 8 points today, while tightness in the March position advanced the contract to 8.78 cents, a new high for the season.

The trade bought May and July, but the foreign buyers were interested in more distant months, with some Bombay brokers placing orders for as far ahead as January. Selling from commission houses, New Orleans and the South was easily absorbed. There was a certain amount of switching activity with March being exchanged for May at 37 points and for July at 60 and 61.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil tumbled 14 to 24 points net lower today under heavy liquidation and stop-loss selling. Cue to the selling drive was found by brokers in Secretary of State Hull's declaration increased excise taxes on imported fish and vegetable oils would conflict with the Administration's reciprocal trade agreement program. Sales totaled 220 lots. March closed ↑7.00, May 7.15, July ↑7.25, September 7.34, October ↑7.34. (↑Bid.)

Crude oil was quoted nominally at 6 cents in the Southeast and Valley and 5¾ nominal in Texas.

Douglas Air Net Last Year Double 1937

$3.76 a Share in 1938 Compares With $1.90 In Previous Year

Santa Mopica, Calif., March 6. The Douglas Aircraft Co. last year spent as much for development and perfection of its products as it paid its stockholders in dividends. This was one of the highlights in the company's annual report, made public here today and reflecting a net profit of $2,147,392.10 for the 12 months ended November 30, last.

The earnings amount to $3.76 per share on 570,683 shares issued and outstanding, and are after provision for all State and Federal taxes. In 1937 the company earned $1,081,513.04 or $1.90 a share. A $3 dividend was paid in November, the report disclosed.

Experimental expenditures in 1938 were $1,797,000 and included completion of the Douglas DC-4, a 42-passenger airliner. When finished and ready for service tests early this year, this plane will represent an investment in construction and engineering in excess of $2,363,000.00.

Burroughs Adding

New York, March 6—Burroughs Adding Machine Co. and subsidiaries, makers of mechanical office equipment, placed 1938 net profit at $2,706,965, equal to 54 cents a share on capital stock, compared with $8,163,404, or $1.63 a share, in 1937. Plants are at Detroit and Plymouth, Mich.

Hazel-Atlas Glass

Hazel-Atlas Glass Co. and subsidiaries reported today net profit for 1938 of $2,157,962, equal to $4.97 a common share, compared with a net profit in 1937 of $2,897,506 or $6.67 a share. The company's offices are in Wheeling, W. Va.

A. G. Spalding & Bros.

A. G. Spalding & Bros., sports goods manufacturers, reported a net loss for the fiscal quarter ended January 31 of $108,284, compared with a net loss in 1937 of $287,472.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. Carlo Sartori, 1519 Connecticut avenue northwest, Washington, D. C., plaintiff, vs. Yvette Sebton Sartori, 36 Rue Fuad 1er, Alexandria, Egypt, defendant. Civil Action No. 1648. The object of this suit is to secure an absolute divorce by the plaintiff from the defendant on the ground of desertion for more than two (2) years. On motion of the plaintiff, it is this 6th day of March, 1939, ordered that the defendant, Yvette Sebton Sartori, cause her appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default, provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post, before said day. JENNINGS BAILEY, Justice. Attest: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By JOHN O. BOWEN, Assistant Clerk. 7.14.21

IN THE COURT OF CHANCERY OF THE State of Delaware in and for New Castle County. In the matter of the receivership of Auth Sausage Company.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that by virtue of an order of the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware, in and for New Castle County, dated the 23rd day of February, A. D. 1939, J. Walter Taylor and George F. Hurley, receivers of Auth Sausage Company, will expose to public auction or vendue on WEDNESDAY, THE 15TH DAY OF MARCH, A. D. 1939, AT 11:30 O'CLOCK IN THE FORENOON, at the Stewart Building, 402 6th Street N. W., in the City of Washington, District of Columbia, all of the assets of Auth Sausage Company consisting of certain office furniture and machines, filing devices, packing house equipment and supplies and accounts receivable. A detailed list and description of the assets to be sold may be obtained from the receivers of Auth Sausage Company, J. Walter Taylor, Security Trust Company, Sixth and Market Streets, Wilmington, Delaware, or George F. Hurley, c/o Warren Craven, Stewart Building, 402 Sixth Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

TERMS OF SALE.

Said assets will be exposed to sale in one lot or in such parcels as the receivers shall determine. The highest and best bidders for said property, or any part thereof, shall immediately deposit with the said receivers in cash ten per centum (10%) of the amount of his said bid. In default of such deposit by such bidder the property struck off to such bidder shall immediately again be exposed to sale. The balance of the purchase price of said property shall be paid by the successful bidder or bidders therefore to the receivers in cash on or before the date of the return hereof, and in the event that any person shall fail to complete the payment of the amount of the bid, the ten per centum (10%) of said bid deposited with said receivers shall be retained by said receivers as liquidated damages and shall not be returned to such bidder but shall be held by the receivers to defray the cost of further sale of such property.

The receivers shall make return of their proceedings under the order of sale at the court room of the Court of Chancery in the County Court House, Wilmington, Delaware, on the 16th day of March, A. D. 1939, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon. Exceptions to the return of said sale or to the proceedings of the receivers under the order of sale shall be filed in the office of the Register in Chancery in and for New Castle County, on or before the time fixed for the return of said sale, and any exceptions so filed will be heard by the court at the time of the return thereof. ANTHONY F. EMORY, Register in Chancery, Wilmington, Delaware, February 23, 1939.

Bids and Proposals

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS.

The Housing Authority of New Orleans will receive sealed bids for the construction and completion of St. Thomas Street Housing Project La. 1-1 comprising 121 Dwelling Buildings, 1 Administration-Service Building, 4 Yard Stations, 1 Gas Meter-House and Local Authority Job Office (the work includes demolition of all existing buildings and clearing of the site, construction and completion of all structures, site improvements, landscape work, heating, plumbing, electric work) until 2 p. m., C. S. T., on the Twenty-third day of April, 1939, at 226 Carondelet Street, New Orleans, Louisiana, and immediately thereafter all bids will be publicly opened and read aloud, in the Commission Council Chamber of the City Hall, New Orleans, La.

The successful bidder will be required to furnish satisfactory performance bond.

Attention is called to the fact that not less than the minimum wage rates as set forth in the specifications must be paid on this project.

Proposed forms of contract documents, including Drawings and Specifications, are on file at the office of the Housing Authority of New Orleans at 226 Carondelet Street, New Orleans, La.

Copies of the documents may be obtained by depositing $100.00 with the Housing Authority of New Orleans for each set of documents so obtained. The amount of the deposit will be refunded to each person who returns the plans and documents in good condition within 10 days after the opening of bids.

Plans or specifications, proposal forms or bid forms, will be issued only to "General Contractors" licensed by the Louisiana State Licensing Board for "General Contractors," or to an authorized representative of a licensed contractor, and in no event will proposal forms or bid forms be issued later than twenty-four hours prior to the hour and date set for receiving proposals or bids.

It will be necessary for the bidder to show evidence of license before a proposal form or bid form is issued, in accordance with Act 397 of the Regular Session of 1938 of the Legislature of Louisiana. The rules and regulations of the Louisiana State Licensing Board for "General Contractors" will apply.

The Housing Authority of New Orleans reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive any informalities in bidding. A certified check or bank draft payable to the Housing Authority of New Orleans, U. S. Government Bonds, or a satisfactory bid bond executed by the bidder and a surety company, in an amount equal to 2½ per cent of the bid shall be submitted with each bid.

No bid shall be withdrawn for a period of sixty (60) days subsequent to the opening of bids without the consent of the Housing Authority of New Orleans.

HOUSING AUTHORITY OF NEW ORLEANS.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

BUREAU chiefs are playing ball with Senator Ellender's projected inquiry on bureau chiefs. They are replying satisfactorily to his inquiry on whether immunity from reprisal will be granted employes who testify before the committee established to ferret out petty czarism in the service.

A STARTLING impetus is given Senator Pat Harrison's economy drive by the Brookings Institution report that says the possibilities of national economy through mere structural organization of Federal administrative agencies are relatively minor in comparison with those which might be realized by the elimination and curtailment of activities in Government. To curtail a Government activity requires the supreme courage in Congressmen, because it calls for the curtailment of constituents' jobs. There's no need for any immediate alarm, because the Congress won't find this courage overnight.

AT THIS moment the United Federal Workers of America are launching a campaign against what it calls the "false economy" moves in Congress. The interesting sidelight is that the U. F. W. A. was organized under the battle cry of down with false economy. Those were memorable days when the more aggressive members of the A. F. G. E. wanted to hold a mass meeting to protest "false economy" and were ousted from the A. F. G. E. therefor. Incidentally, economy, whether false or not, hasn't made much headway since then.

CONGRESS might make some sort of compromise by going the full limit in extending the civil service in the Federal Government. Of course, this would be no safeguard against the establishment of new activities, but it would make certain that no more personnel would be hired than actually is needed. Congressmen would lose the temptation and political necessity of loading the service with political appointees, would save themselves a lot of bother and would aid economy by that one simple device—the merit system. The outlay necessary to strengthen the civil service and remove it completely from political influence would pay for itself before the year closed.

ALL right, here are some more Federal jobs: chief of occupational informational and guidance service, $5,600; specialist, occupational information, $4,600; specialist, consultation and field service, $4,600; specialist in occupations for girls and women, $3,800, Office of Education, Interior Department. Fifty-three is the top age limit.

Another: junior multigraph operator, $1,440. This is open to persons 18 years of age. These are civil service jobs.

SOME time ago, the Agriculture Department made a strong bid to recruit for its scientific branches the top college graduates in the classes of this June. The drive to get the cream of the crop was concentrated, and the attractions of the Agriculture Department as the greatest research agency in the scientific world were borne down on. The number of responses was double that expected by the department. But it hasn't been ascertained as yet whether all the applicants for the junior scientific jobs are prospective graduates this June. The department is bothered lest many of the applicants were men and women out of college for some time. If it proves that most of them are still in college, then the department will know that it has definitely sold itself to the brightest young men of the colleges—something private industry has been doing for years.

A gentleman from out of town called by to ask us what the New Deal means by saying it can spend itself out of debt. The gentleman was quite serious, saying that he had been trying to do that very thing—to spend himself out of debt—for several years. Right now, he said, he was on the verge of bankruptcy. He thought maybe that in attempting that experiment—which he himself had disastrously tried—the New Deal knew some way of making it work. This column couldn't help him; it doesn't know the formula.

SOMEONE calls in with a cheerier note: Spring has come; the employes of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing are eating their lunches, in shirt sleeves, on the roof of the building—as is their wont in summer.

Bob Burns Says—

My Aunt Boo, she's a brave woman. Once she chased a runaway elephant out of her garden with a broomstick. Busted the dern thing over his backside. But she's like most females—can't stand the sight of a mouse.

Reminds me of that woman in Boston who screamed for help over the telephone an' brought the police, with drawn guns, a-racin' to her house. What do you s'pose had happened? A mouse had got caught in a trap, in the dead of night, an' was flappin' around the kitchen, tryin' to escape. "Please, officers, let the poor little creature go!" she says, "before one or the other of us is scared to death!" The police captain blows up. "An' you brought us clear out her jes' for this? Why, Madam, we thought you had a burglar!" "Oh, I had a burglar break in last week," she snaps. "But I took care of him myself. After the beatin' I gave him, I don't think he'll 'burgle' any more!" You know, folks, it's jes' commencin' to dawn on me that the big things in life don't mean much to a woman—but the little things do!

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

According to Robert A. Brannon, expert, who is conducting a free bridge school at the Garden City Hotel, Garden City, a player need know only the requirements and responses for an opening bid of one to be a skillful bidder as approximately 95 per cent of deals involve an opening bid of one.

"(1) The offensive type: Hands containing either (a) a seven-card or longer suit, (b) two five-card suits, (c) two six-card suits, (d) one six and one five-card suit. Five per cent of hands fall in this class.

♠KQ98643
♡A83
◇87
♣9

"The intermediate type: Hands containing either (a) one six-card suit or (b) one five-card suit, with the remaining cards split between the other suits in several different ways. Seventy per cent are in this category.

♠AQ9754
♡KQ75
♣98

"The defensive type: Hands containing either (a) two four-card suits or (b) one four-card suit. Very evenly balanced hands. Twenty-four per cent are of this type.

♠A87
◇AK86
♣98

"Now, what do these percentages show us? That on 95 per cent of the deals you have hand patterns (distribution) that do not lend themselves to opening bids higher than one except in occasional deals, where you have an abnormal excuse of honor cards to bolster up the distribution deficiency of the hand. Hence, it logically follows that on only about 10 per cent of the deals do you hold a combinationn warranting more than a minimum opening bid of one; and this is why we say to you, unequivocally, that contract bidding in about 90 to 95 per cent of the deals relates to and revolves around the simple minimum opening bid of one suit or no trump."

Sometimes straight bidding scores where fancy conventions fail. "If you want to make a slam, bid it," is the advice of one expert, and the bidding shown with today's hand bears this out. The hand was contributed by E. N. W., who failed to reach the slam when the hand was played. She writes:

"Here is a hand my husband and I drew in a game the other night. Obviously South can make a small slam on spades, but how can it be bid? We are pretty green. We got to four. How would you go about it to get the six?"

Six can be made either through a cross ruff or establishing the dummy hand by conceding a diamond trick and trumping two clubs. Declarer will lose either a diamond or a heart.

Bobby Coon Demonstrates

Who lives to learn will learn to live,
For better ways will knowledge give.

Bobby Coon had caught a Mouse at the edge of the little swamp through which the Laughing Brook flows to enter the Smiling Pool. He had carried that Mouse to a shallow pool made by the Laughing Brook and there had washed it before eating it. Jimmy Skunk had watched him and could see no sense at all in the performance. He said as much. Bobby Coon explained that it was a habit, a neat habit. Jimmy Skunk called it a foolish habit.

Bobby Coon was good-natured about it. "Have it your way, Jimmy," said he. "Have it your way. You don't have to do it, but I enjoy my food more for having it clean."

He was lying on a log that was part way out in the shallow pool. The bottom of that pool was of soft mud. As Bobby talked he was reaching down with hands and arms down in the mud and water nearly to the shoulder. He wasn't looking at what he was doing. He was looking over at Jimmy Skunk.

"What are you doing?" demanded Jimmy Skunk.

"Just feeling around," replied Bobby.

"Have you lost something?" Jimmy wanted to know.

"Then what are you feeling around for?" demanded Jimmy.

"Anything I can find. That is, anything that I can eat," explained Bobby.

"But how do you know that there is anything in there?" persisted Jimmy.

"I don't. I'm finding out," replied Bobby. All the time he was looking over at Jimmy Skunk. Not once did he look at what he was doing.

"That's a silly way of doing if you ask me," said Jimmy.

"Is it? I don't find it so," replied Bobby, and pulled up out of the mud a mussel. Perhaps you would call it a fresh-water clam.

"You knew that was down there," accused Jimmy.

Bobby shook his head. "No, sir," said he. "All I knew was that this looked like the kind of a place that one might be in. This isn't a very big one but it is something."

He held it up. It didn't look at all inviting. It was covered with mud and ooze. Bobby began to wash. He washed away all the mud and ooze. With his little black hands he rubbed the shell clean on both sides. That clam looked very different indeed. Bobby opened the shell and ate the clam with relish. "Jerry Muskrat would have liked that," said he. That was true. Jerry would have liked it. Jimmy Skunk had an idea that he would have liked it too.

Presently Bobby got up and stretched. Then he stepped off that log into the water. It was very shallow. It came only up to his shoulders. He began to wade about, and as he waded he kept feeling about in the mud, first with one hand, then with the other. After a while he found another clam. It was muddy as the first one had been. He took it back to the log, washed it and ate it.

"Perhaps now you see why I wash my food," said he.

Jimmy admitted that those clams washed had looked a lot more inviting that they had been when covered with mud and ooze. "What else do you get down in there?" he asked.

"Frogs," replied Bobby. He had left that pool in which he had been wading and was walking along the edge of another shallow pool. Even as he spoke an early Frog dived into the water and disappeared in the mud. Bobby waded in and began to feel around in the mud where that Frog had disappeared. A moment later he triumphantly pulled the Frog out, washed it, then took it ashore and ate it.

"I get so much food in the mud and so have to wash it, that I've got the habit and wash most of my food," he explained.

Start Old-Age Pension in '40, Swope Urges

Tells House Committee $15 Per Person Is All Government Should Pay

By the Associated Press.

Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric Co., told the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday he believed $15 per person per month was as much as the Federal Government should pay just now toward the cost of old-age pensions.

Suggested Payments in 1940

He suggested payments of old-age pensions be started next year instead of 1942, also that an increase in old-age pension taxes from 1 to 1½ per cent on both employers and employes be allowed to go into effect next year.

He said he had no idea what amount was proper to be held in the social security reserve fund, which, under present law, is scheduled to reach about $47,000,000,000 in 1980.

He recommended:

Elimination of present maximum limits to bring maximum for dependent children to $30 the same as for aged and blind.

Reimbursement of States and localities by Federal Government for 50 per cent of cost of administration of aid to dependent children.

Urges Vocational Aid

W. M. Walter of the National Rehabilitation Association, Inc., Harrisburg, Pa., urged approval of amendments increasing funds for vocational rehabilitation and establishment in the Interior Department of an office of vocational rehabilitation to administer this phase of the social security program.

Paul T. Beisser, president of the Child Welfare League of America, Baltimore, Md., supporting proposed expansion of the aid to dependent children program, urged inclusion of a system of "variable grants" to equalize child care in the various states.

Overholser Tells Of E. B. McLean's Mental Escape

The "fantastic system of grandiose delusions" to which Edward B. McLean allegedly fled from reality was described yesterday to Justice Laws, hearing litigation over the $10,000,000 McLean estate.

Justice Laws refused to hear George B. Fraser as McLean's personal attorney after considering a report of Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital, who examined McLean last week. William E. Leahy and Robert H. McNeill, attorneys, noted an appeal.

Dr. Overholser said the patient was incapable of understanding legal actions. "By his creation of a world of fantasy," Dr. Overholser commented, "he has found a complete refuge from the various reality-situations which would not only be annoying and embarrassing but intolerable to him if he faced them."

D. C. Court Gets Will of Lincoln's Granddaughter

The District Court yesterday was asked to authorize administration of the Washington property of President Lincoln's granddaughter, Mrs. Mary Lincoln Isham, who died at Manchester, Vt., last November 21.

The home of Robert Todd Lincoln, son of the Civil War President and once Secretary of War, was part of the estate. At 3014 N street northwest, it is assessed at $80,732. Also included is an $18,500 interest in a block of securities.

Mrs. Isham left $10,000 to Christ Church in Georgetown, $10,000 to the Washington Cathedral, and the Healy portrait of President Lincoln to the White House.

Need to Use 'Stamps' to Buy Surplus Foods

By the Associated Press.

A "coupon" system of distributing surplus food products to relief cases was being drafted yesterday at the Agricultural Department. Food coupons—or "stamps"—acceptable at retail grocery stores, were being considered. Two types would be distributed, one entitling recipients to purchase a given quantity of surplus foods and the other enabling them to buy any commodity, except cigarettes and liquor. The Government would redeem the stamps.

Officials have expressed hope that the new system would be operating on an experimental basis in six large cities by mid-April.

Valuable Deeds Unclaimed

Dr. William J. Tompkins, recorder of deeds, looks through file of deeds dating back as far as 1792. Some are valuable and remain unclaimed

1,500,000 Original Land Deeds Cram Recorder's Office Vaults

Dr. Thompkins Wishes Owners Would Claim, Many Being of Great Historical Value

More than 1,500,000 original documents have piled up in his vaults since 1792, Dr. William J. Thompkins, District recorder of deeds, announced yesterday . . . and he said he wished the owners would come and get them.

The papers, Dr. Thompkins explained, belong to the present owners of land, and he is obliged to surrender them upon proof of ownership.

There is probably gold in those vaults, Dr. Thompkins added by way of enticement, because many of the District's early land owners were people who played a large part in history.

Dr. Thompkins added the deeds have to be guarded day and night. They fill seven big storage rooms and he is getting cramped for space.

Episcopal Women To Hold Memorial

Women representing some 75 Episcopal parishes will gather today at 11 a. m. at the Washington Cathedral or the annual memorial service of the Diocesan Auxiliary, with the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, delivering the main address. Names of members having departed during 1938 will be read at the services.

After luncheon in Satterlee Hall, a meditation program will follow in St. Albans Church. The Very Rev. Chester B. Emerson, dean of Trinity Cathedral, Cleveland, will preach. Mrs. A. Guy Reber, president of the Diocesan Auxiliary, will preside.

The $10,000 mark in the $75,000 campaign was passed yesterday, according to L. Gordon Leech, director.

President Opens New Home For Camp Fire Girls by Wire

President Roosevelt yesterday pressed a telegraph key opening new national headquarters of Camp Fire Girls in New York, on the organization's twenty-fourth anniversary.

The gold key used by Presidents for 30 years was missing, however. The key was the personal property of the late E. W. Smithers, chief White House telegrapher, but had remained in the White House until his recent death.

The President was assisted by Jane Brandt and Patsy Birge, both of Arlington, Va., who concluded the ceremony with this statement to the President:

"Mr. President, since you are honorary president of the Camp Fire Girls, we wish to tell you that we pledge ourselves to the ideals of Democracy . . . By conducting ourselves fairly in the homes in which we now live and in homes of our own, which we hope to have some day, and by carrying these principles into our activities outside, we believe that we can best serve our country."

2 Reno Men Lose Mail Fraud Appeals

New York, March 6 (AP).—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals today affirmed the conviction of William J. Graham and James C. McKay, of Reno, who were sentenced to nine years each and fined $11,000 for mail fraud and conspiracy.

Two Face Coroner In Woman's Death

Two men were released under $2,000 bond each yesterday on technical charges of "held for the coroner" in connection with the death Sunday of Mrs. Agnes V. Mergner, 35, 808 D street southeast.

Mrs. Mergner, well-to-do former bakery owner, died at Providence Hospital Sunday from the effects of an alleged illegal operation. She was the mother of five children, police stated.
